Boost 'Big Bang' Creation Idea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy astronomers reported today discovery of new evidence supporting the "Big Bang" theory that the universe was created billions of years ago by the explosion of a fireball.

The evidence consists of X-rays believed to come from an invisible galaxy some 76 million-trillion miles from the planet Earth, the team of Navy scientists said.

The pattern and relatively low level intensity of the X-rays substantiate "Big Bang" theorists' beliefs that space radiation has an extremely cold temperature.

The temperature would have to be "cold" to confirm the "Big Bang" theory. Earlier measurements taken in the Milky Way galaxy by infra-red techniques have indicated space radiation is warm.

The "Big Bang" theory has long been the more heavily-favored of the two major concepts to explain the birth of the universe.

It holds that some 10 billion years ago all the matter for a potential universe was contained in a primordial fireball—a massive single "atom"—having a temperature of 10 billion degrees.

This super-fireball lasted only a second, then exploded with a "Big Bang"—to eventually form all the stars, galaxies and planets.

The theory also holds that radiation from the initial blast still pervades the universe—so that at least some of the radio waves detectable on earth by radio-telescopes represent, in effect, the very whispers or echoes of creation itself.

The rival theory to the "Big Bang" is the so-called "Steady State" concept—also known as "the theory of continuous creation."

It contends the universe has always been in a steady state, but that matter is continuously being fed into it—possibly just one atom at a time—and that this is what makes the universe expand, rather than any primeval fireworks.

The new evidence was obtained by an X-ray telescope carried 102 miles high by an Aerobee rocket launched from White Sands, N.M., missile range in April 1968.

The telescope, in an up-and-down flight lasting only a few minutes, zeroed in on an optically-invisible radio galaxy called "Centaurus-A"—the nearest of the powerful radio-emitting galaxies, the Navy said.

The evidence dispels doubt recently cast on the "Big Bang" theory of the universe's creation, the scientists said.

The X rays are "truly a measurement of the space radiation as it exists out in the cold environment of outer space, whereas the infra-red observations

New Delay On Peters Building

Another in a long series of delays was added to the proposed demolition of the crumbling Peters Building Thursday when Circuit Court Judge Frank Hayes ruled the city must hold another condemnation hearing.

On March 12 the City Council ordered the Peters Building, which has been partially collapsed for two years, and two adjoining structures at 116 and 112 West Second to be demolished.

But owners of the adjoining buildings, Ida L. Hall, 1415 South Barrett, and J. I. Riley, 1423 South Carr, appealed the council's ruling to the Circuit Court.

Riley and Mrs. Hall had indicated that they would agree to demolition if an attempt could be made to salvage at least a portion of the building. However, city building inspector Woody Garrison has said it would be impossible to tear down one of the three

Bureau of Census To Recheck Areas

A Bureau of the Census official is re-checking two areas in Sedalia after it was determined they had been missed during the recent enumeration, Bill Hall, Sedalia industrial development director, said Friday.

Siegurd Dahlan, supervisor from the census office in St. Paul, Minn., was in Sedalia Thursday, Hall said, after "we agreed that the preliminary census figure for the city was probably wrong."

According to preliminary findings, the city had a population of 23,921 — a total which touched off a rash of complaints from government, civic and industrial leaders here.

"In my discussion with Mr. Dahlan," Hall said, "we found there were more new houses built than residences taken off the market during the last 10 years."

"However, we don't expect any substantial changes in the preliminary figures," Hall added. "The total may go up to 25,000."

Hall said the reason for the low figure was that 10 years ago "the average size of a family in Sedalia was 4.3. Now it's more like 2.8, which would explain why the population is not as high as expected."

Hall emphasized that there was still time for people who had not been counted to contact the Census Bureau.

The two areas in Sedalia which are being rechecked were not identified by Hall. "We don't want to embarrass any of the people who worked on the census count. If the areas were missed, it was due to an honest mistake," he said.

According to Hall, the Bureau of the Census is to have its report prepared for President Nixon Dec. 1. "We should find out sometime that month what the final figure for Sedalia will be," he said.

"At least the conclusions as stated in the paper by the reporter are just unbelievable... that there were no troops injured, that no stones were thrown and that there was a question of whether there was even a riot," he said.

Del Corso upheld earlier Guard assertions that all the Guardsmen in the force involved in the shootings had been hit by thrown objects and said two had teeth knocked out.

Del Corso said Jerris Leonard, head of the Justice Department Civil Rights Division, had assured him that the report would be kept under tight secrecy.

The Beacon Journal said its story was based on a 10-page summary of the 7,500-word FBI report that Leonard signed the summary.

The FBI report said six Ohio guardsmen could possibly be charged with criminal offenses, the Akron Beacon Journal said in a copyright story published Thursday.

The newspaper said its information came from a 10-page summary of a 7,500-page FBI report which has not yet been public. It said the summary was signed by Jerris Leonard, chief of the Justice Department Civil Rights Division.

More than 100 FBI agents investigated the shootings. Guard officials said about 100 troops were surrounded on three sides, had run out of tear gas

Snap, Pop At Cereal Accusation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cereal makers have defended their breakfast foods as nutritious and wholesome in the face of Senate testimony of a nutrition expert who said most cereals contribute little to good health.

Most leading dry cereal makers defended their products against the accusations of Robert B. Choate, 40, a Washington based citizen-lobbyist. Some major producers indicated he didn't know what he was talking about.

Choate appeared before the Senate consumer subcommittee armed with results of a study he made that showed 40 out of 60 types of cereals lacked enough nutritional value to rate as half a complete meal.

A spokesman for Kellogg Co. said "leading nutrition authorities in the nation just do not agree with Mr. Choate."

Dr. John J. Hopper, Kellogg's director of research, said "civil engineer Choate's theories and so-called formula might be meaningful or applicable if you are digging a mineshaft, but they are completely valueless as a yardstick for measuring the nutritional values of any type food—not just a cereal."

Choate, a former consultant to the White House, Department of Health, Education and Welfare and several congressional committees, said his ranking of the 60 cereals oversimplified the interaction of nutrients. But "it does portray what cereal companies are boasting about on their own boxes."

General Foods, makers of Post cereals, said Choate's study and testimony included "a great many technical errors," one of which it said was the condemnation of presweetened cereals on the grounds they may lead to the consumption of too much sugar.

"In our opinion, exactly the opposite is true," the company said. "Presweetened cereals provide a measure of control over sugar intake that is not present when the young consumer sweetens his own."

Big Bombing Effort On Enemy Positions

SAIGON (AP) — American fighter-bombers today made massive attacks on North Vietnamese positions around fire base Ripcord, abandoned Thursday by U. S. troops after three weeks of heavy losses.

The U. S. Command said that by noon Air Force and Marine pilots had flown 36 sorties against enemy positions around the base 13 miles east of the Laotian border. A sortie is one flight by one plane.

Fifty miles to the northwest and only a mile below the demilitarized zone, U. S. B52 bombers carrying 10 times the load of the fighter-bombers attacked North Vietnamese base camps and supply depots.

South Vietnamese infantrymen sweeping five miles southwest of Ripcord found a North Vietnamese camp that had been smashed by a B52 raid Wednesday, but the destruction had no apparent effect on the enemy pressure which forced the American withdrawal the next day.

No new ground action was reported in the region although U.S. patrols were operating out of four other fire bases in the area. Ranging from four miles north of Ripcord to nine miles to the southeast, the bases form a semicircle north and northeast of the A Shau valley, and astride the routes used by the North Vietnamese to the populous coastal lowlands 25 miles to the east.

The American command apparently will try to fill the gap left by the closing of Ripcord with increased bombing raids that have the advantage of holding down U.S. casualties.

In Cambodia, the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese stepped up harassment attacks in Prey Veng Province some 30 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, but elsewhere in the country little fighting was reported.

A military spokesman in Phnom Penh said Prey Veng, the provincial capital, was hit by mortars for three hours Thursday night but no casualties were reported. A brief mortar attack also was reported on the village of Svay Antor.

Just north of Cambodia's border with Laos, Laotian government troops reinforced the local garrison on Khong Island, in the Mekong, in an attempt to counter North Vietnamese guerrillas infiltrating the island.

Mercury Dumpers Are Liable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has authorized civil suits against 10 companies whose names were turned in by the Interior Department for allegedly dumping mercury in lakes and rivers of seven states.

The suits will be the first filed by the Justice Department under the little used 1899 Refuse Act. Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell said today.

U.S. attorneys in districts where the alleged polluters are located have been authorized to file suits seeking injunctions against continued discharge of mercury and to require the companies to take steps to remedy the effects of past pollution.

"Because mercury pollution is a serious matter, civil injunction proceedings are being authorized instead of the usual criminal action under the criminal Refuse Act, where the penalty is relatively light," said Asst. Atty. Gen. Shiro Kashiwa.

Kashiwa is head of the department's land and natural resources division.

Criminal penalties under the act provide for fines of up to $2,500 and jail sentences of up to one year for individuals. Justice Department spokesmen contend injunctive action requiring polluters to stop does more to improve the environment than assessing the criminal penalties.

Mercury is used by various industries, particularly those manufacturing paper and chemicals. When the mercury is discharged into waterways in compound with other chemicals it tends to concentrate in the flesh of fish and is thus passed on to humans who eat the fish.

The element stays in the body for lengthy periods and can build up to poisonous levels if enough is consumed.

Suits under the 71-year-old anti-pollution statute were ordered to be filed against:

Georgia-Pacific Corp., Birmingham, Wash., for allegedly discharging mercury into Puget Sound; Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., of Niagara Falls, N.Y., for allegedly discharging mercury into the Niagara River.

Oxford Paper Co., Rumford, Maine, for discharging mercury into the Androscoggin River; Weyerhaeuser Co., Longview, Wash., for discharging mercury into the Columbia River.

Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., of Augusta, Ga., discharge of mercury into the Savannah River; Diamond Shamrock Corp. of Delaware City, for discharge of mercury into the Delaware River.

Diamond Shamrock Corp., Muscle Shoals, Ala., discharge into Pond Creek, which flows into the Tennessee River; Allied Chemical Co., Solvay, N.Y., into Onondaga Lake.

International Mining Chemical Co., Chlor-Alkali Division, Orrington, Maine, into the Penobscot River; Pennwalt Chemical Co., Calvert City, Ky., into the Tennessee River.

Tough Anti-Crime Bill Made Washington Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's anticrime bill for the nation's capital, complete with the controversial "no-knock" and pretrial detention provisions, has become the first of the White House's crime fighting proposals to clear Congress.

Senate approval on a 54-33 vote Thursday climaxed a week of debate marked by charges that parts of the bill are repressive and violate constitutional rights.

Most of those against passage were liberals, but Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., a strict constitutionalist, led the fight against the bill, passed by the House last week 332 to 64. Ervin called passage "a victory for repressive criminal procedures."

Chiefly in dispute were sections permitting pretrial detention of defendants judged likely to endanger community safety and authorizing police to enter homes without knocking while executing search and arrest warrants.

Opponents also protested provisions for expanded police wiretapping under court orders, adult trials for juveniles charged with violent crimes such as murder and rape, and mandatory minimum sentences for second offenders convicted of crimes of violence while armed.

Other parts of the bill providing for a reorganization of the local courts, more judges, an expanded bail agency, and a public defender system were not disputed.

The measure was in line with recommendations submitted last year by Nixon, who described Washington in his 1968 election campaign as "the crime capital of the world."

Other administration crime-fighting proposals still before Congress include measures to renew federal aid to local police agencies, revised penalties for narcotics related crimes, combat organized crime, and apply preventive detention to all federal jurisdictions.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he believed sufficient safeguards had been written into the preventive detention and no-knock search provisions to enable them to withstand attacks on their constitutionality.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said "the pivotal question is whether or not repressive measures such as no-knock, preventive detention and mandatory sentencing are necessary to make our society law-abiding."

"I believe we are drifting into a trend of thinking in this country that is forgetful of the value of our liberties and how they were won and that places simplistic faith in the mistaken notion that force and repression are the only routes to achieving law and order," Hughes said.

NEWS IN BRIEF

JEFFERSON CITY — Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick predicted today that about 787,000 Missouri voters will turn out for the Aug. 4 primary, 35 per cent more than voted in 1966.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General John Mitchell has ordered a stop to the use of the words "Mafia" and "Cosa Nostra," saying such terms cast unfair reflections on "descent" Italian-Americans.

Safecrackers Hit Again At Two City Businesses

By PETE DANIELS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

"These guys are really good. If they keep it up, they'll probably make a good score one of these days," Detective Sgt. Perry Franklin of the Police Department said after four safes were hit during the night at two separate business places.

Targets for the safe crackers were Tullis-Hall Dairy and the MFA Central Cooperative on Clinton Road.

A substantial loss was averted at Tullis-Hall when an employee drove up and surprised the safecrackers while they were inside the building. They fled without detection, however.

It was not determined how much money was taken from the safe at MFA.

Police said they feel that at least three or four men were involved in the MFA break-in, with possibly that many at Tullis-Hall.

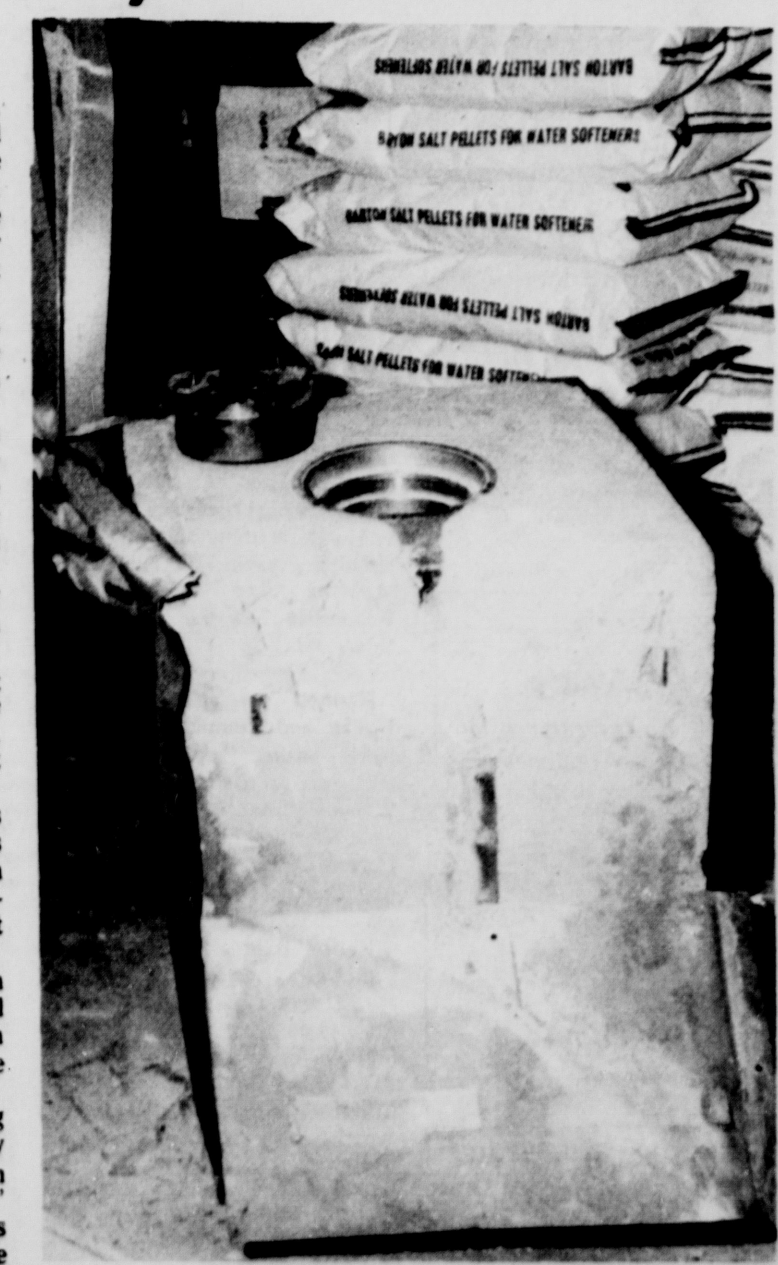

Franklin said it was reasonable to presume that this group is the same one which broke into a safe at the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. plant Wednesday.

The safe at MFA consists of a solid block of concrete encased in steel, police said, with a circular receptacle in the center.

"Whoever got into that thing knew exactly what to do. They went right to the point which would let them open it," Franklin said. "That safe is about as good as they can be made," he added.

At both Tullis-Hall and MFA, the safe crackers succeeded in opening one safe and failed to gain entrance to another. No estimate of loss was available.

Police said that Bob Stean, an employee at Tullis-Hall, arrived for work about 2 a.m. Friday

Thieves Succeeded

This is the safe at the MFA Central Cooperative which was broken into sometime Thursday night. Due to the nature of the safecracking, police believe they are dealing with professionals. A safe at Tullis-Hall Dairy was also broken into, while two other safes, one at each place, frustrated similar attempts.

Airlines' Fare Bonanza From Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines may stand to make nearly $50 million a year more under their recently granted authority to round fares upward to the nearest dollar.

Rounding off ticket prices was approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board to simplify the fare system. The new prices, and an aircraft use tax increase from 5 to 8 per cent, went into effect July 1.

The airlines say the new tax rate will take a $10 million bite out of the additional revenue.

On jet airliners that annual charge is $25 per plane, plus 3½ cents a pound. On piston-engine aircraft the fee is $25 a year, plus 2 cents a pound.

The simplified fares went into effect for a two-month trial period July 1, when the federal tax was raised.

The CAB authorized scheduled airlines to raise existing fares by sufficient penny amounts to provide a new total, including tax, in even dollars.

Nathan H. Knorr

Witnesses Announce Convention

Harold G. Matson, presiding minister of the Sedalia congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses has announced that the local Witnesses have been invited to attend the "Men of Goodwill" District Assemblies to be held in 46 cities throughout the United States and Canada this month through August. He stated that some 400,000 delegates will be attending the conventions from all 50 states and that the four-day program will be oriented to benefit parents and young people. There will be dramas presented with Biblical and modern settings as well as symposiums.

A featured speaker at many of the conventions will be Nathan H. Knorr, president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, the representative agency for Jehovah's Witnesses in 203 lands.

As president, Knorr travels some 50,000 miles a year visiting some 90 countries. Born in Bethlehem, Pa. in 1905, he became a member of the headquarters staff in 1923 and president in 1942. He will deliver the highlighted public lecture Sunday afternoon, "Saving the Human Race — in the Kingdom Way."

Schedule Meetings On Coming Revival Cottage prayer meetings in preparation for the coming revival will begin this Sunday at Memorial Baptist Church, 20 miles north of Sedalia.

John Beard, a lay member of First Baptist Church, Warrensburg, will conduct the revival, beginning at 8 p.m. July 31st and continuing through August 9th. Beard is a popular speaker, quite active as a layman of his church, and has had extended speaking experience.

Rev. Ross Woodruff, a former missionary with the Arizona Indians, is interim pastor at Memorial.

KDRO Speaker

Speaker of the week for KDRO's "Morning Devotions" program will be the Rev. Marvin Albright. The program is heard each weekday at 8:45 a.m.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration's Latin American policies have been damned by critics as the "politics of neglect." Supporters praise U.S. relations as "politics of realism."

But both sides agree on one thing—the administration's South-of-the-border diplomacy has not been practiced by the United States for some time.

President Nixon's "low profile" policies represent a studied effort to make the United States less visible in Latin America.

Economic assistance to Latin America has dipped to a 10-year low. Military aid has been cut

Most of the airlines have asked the CAB to continue the fare-adjustment authority indefinitely, beyond its Aug. 31 expiration date.

The CAB asked the airlines to estimate the annual revenue increase and also to indicate their anticipated annual payments under the aircraft use tax.

Not all the airlines submitted estimates of the tax, but those that did included United, $2.6 million; Eastern, $1.5 million; American, $1.4 million; Delta, $930,000; Continental, $360,000; Braniff, $338,000; Frontier, $140,000; North Central, $106,000; Piedmont, $100,000; Ozark, $89,000; Alaska, $50,000; Aloha, $20,000.

The largest airline, United, estimated that its 1971 added revenue from the change would total about $11.5 million.

American set its 1971 probable yield at $8.2 million, and estimated the amount for the last half of 1970 at $4 million.

Religious Periodicals Entangled in Dispute

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A rough-house feud has broken out between an anti-leftist Catholic weekly, Twin Circle, and a Roman Catholic bishops' committee.

"Arbitrary and high-handed tactics," the paper charged regarding the committee, accusing it of usurping power in the long struggle between West Coast grape growers and pickers.

The committee fired back that the newspaper had perpetrated a "gross fraud on the Catholic community," had "fanned the flames of prejudice and mistrust and has done a grave disservice to the cause of truth and justice."

Besides the run-in with the bishops' committee, the paper also was in a tussle with a noted priest-lawyer, now running for Congress, and also with a Jewish group.

Assailing the candidacy of the Rev. Robert F. Drinan, of Boston, in Massachusetts' third congressional district, an article in the current issue of Twin Circle calls him a "militant anti-Communist."

Asked for comment, Father Drinan, dean of the Boston College Law School, a Catholic institution, dismissed the attack as "smear tactics," misrepresenting his position, and said "it shouldn't be dignified with a reply."

The paper's editor, the Rev. Daniel Lyons, a hard-hitting anti-Communist and advocate of using more force in the Vietnam war, said he opposed any priest seeking public office—in line with a general bishops' policy.

Father Lyons also came under criticism of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Its bulletin accused him of "stark anti-Semitic innuendo," quoting him as saying directors of the major broadcasting networks are dominated by persons "with very Jewish names" who "discriminate against Christians."

These are "misquotations, attributed to me falsely," Father Lyons commented from his offices in Los Angeles. "The only thing I've written editorially on this was to say that the major faiths should be equally represented on the boards of directors of the networks."

He called the anti-Semitic charge "completely false. Forty per cent of my employees are Jewish." He said that the paper is strongly pro-Israel.

The national weekly, founded in 1967 to combat alleged departures from orthodox Catholicism, is owned by a subsidiary of the Schick Investment Corp., an arm of the enterprises of West Coast millionaire Patrick J. Frawley, a backer of various conservative causes.

The main conflict with Father Lyons' own church leaders involved an editorial he turned out denouncing the role of the U.S. Bishops' Ad Hoc Committee on the Farm Labor Dispute between California grape growers and workers.

The committee of five bishops earlier this year had managed to bring some growers and union representatives together for the first time, resulting in several contractual agreements, the first break in the prolonged deadlock.

Father Lyons charged that the workers are not behind the organizing efforts of union leader Caesar Chavez and have no vote on the matter, but that they and the employers are being coerced into it, with the aid of the bishops committee.

"That the name of the U.S. Bishops is being used in the campaign to organize the table grape industry is unprecedented," he wrote. "We have also found it bitterly resented."

Last week the committee, headed by Auxiliary Bishop Joseph F. Donnelly of Hartford, Conn., struck back, saying "it is incredible that a publication calling itself 'Catholic' should publish such a collection of untruths, innuendos, distortions and plain inaccuracies."

Declaring that Father Lyons' account "is but one of a series of editorials and articles in Twin Circle which have consistently impeded the peaceful resolution of the farm labor dispute," the committee said the latest instance "is particularly deplorable because it comes at a time when it could do irreparable harm to both the growers and the union."

The committee noted that it was currently meeting in Fresno, Calif., with the Western Employers Council, involving larger growers who produce more than 50 per cent of California table grapes—at its express invitation.

Soviet Union Ridicules Jewish 'Star of David'

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Star of David," symbol of the world's oldest, most basically formative and most persecuted faith in God, is a sign of ridicule today in the Soviet Union.

It figures regularly in cartoons reviling the state of Israel and her Jewish adherents.

"There has been a marked increase in pressures on Soviet Jews, but they're no longer passive," says Gunther Lawrence, after three years' research into the matter. "They're asserting themselves more than ever before."

But despite their sharpening resistance, they're up against a mounting tide of Soviet anti-Semitism, as documented in various studies in this country, including Lawrence's new book published by Doubleday, "Three Million More."

The question, referring to the Soviet's total Jewish population, recalls the six million Jews slain under nazism and suggests a similar, yet craftier shadow now hovers over the Jews under Soviet communism.

"It's a genocide of the spirit instead of a genocide of the flesh," says Lawrence, distinguishing the present Soviet campaign from the Nazi mass slaughter.

But he questions whether the spiritual assault is any less destructive.

Although denied by Soviet officials, the Communist government has moved systematically to erase Jewish heritage and culture, Lawrence says, in ways resembling those of the earlier czarist regime.

"Nearly the same means are being used, but they're more subtle," he said in an interview. "But the victims are the same—the Jews."

Similar conclusions are drawn in the current issue of Religion in Communist Dominated Areas, issued by the National Council of Churches, and edited by the Rev. Drs. Paul B. Anderson and Blahoslav S. Hruby, both experts on Soviet policies.

"Never before has the Soviet press published so many anti-Israel, anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic articles," says Dr. Hruby. "Many anti-Israel cartoons are reminiscent of the notorious Nazi anti-Semitic weekly, 'Der Sturmer'."

Reproducing samples of the anti-Jewish drawings and articles, the publication also cites private letters, appeals and statements reaching the Vatican, the United Nations and the World Council of Churches about intensifying "harassments and persecution."

Lawrence, former staff officer of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and now a communications consultant to various Jewish groups, including their joint American Conference on Soviet Jews, traveled extensively in Russia among Hebrew congregations and is now a communications consultant to various Jewish groups, including their joint American Conference on Soviet Jews, traveled extensively in Russia in gathering his data.

He says all religions there are under restrictions to some extent, but that Jews are a "special target" of efforts to suppress their customs, identity, convictions and religious observances.

note during the first 18 months of the previous administration, former President Lyndon B. Johnson used American troops to quell uprisings in both Panama and the Dominican Republic.

Under Nixon, the observers pointed out, Latin America is one area of the world which has been free of crises for the United States.

The Nixon policy is based on the belief that the Latin American nations themselves—and not the United States—bear the responsibility for solving the problems that plague most of the region—underdevelopment, unemployment, urbanization, population, illiteracy and malnutrition, to name a few.

Administration officials believe the United States created widespread disillusionment in Latin America during the 1960s by making promises on which it could not possibly deliver.

But one U.S. ambassador, who asked not to be identified, said in a recent interview:

"The (Nixon administration) policy is fine for the short run.

Middle Age Carries Identifying Traits

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter what your birth certificate says, you are middle aged if—

Your doctor calls you by your first name.

Everybody within hearing distance sighs when you start to tell a story.

It is your considered opinion that no hotel room in the world is worth more than $5 a night.

You still kind of miss not seeing Robert Benchley on screen or in print.

Somewhere in the attic you still have an old mah jongg set, a broken-stringed ukelele, and a ouija board.

Some days you feel like you can keep one of your chins up—but not both of them.

You don't actually sit down in a chair anymore. You just kind of sag into it.

It takes you longer to put your shoes on in the morning, and after you do, you rest for a moment or two brooding whether it's really worthwhile to get up.

The only tune you still remember all the words to is "It's a long way to Tipperary," but after two Martinis you are willing to sing them any old time and any old where.

You vaguely suspect there isn't as much fun in the world as there used to be—but if there is, the wrong people are having it.

The dentist warns you that if you don't let him do something about them this year, next year may be too late. You conclude that from now on your life will be full of more dentures than adventures.

That second cup of coffee makes you feel a little bilious.

Half the girls in the office stay home on your birthdays so they won't have to give you a kiss; those who do come in only peck you on the cheek.

No matter how you comb it the bald spot shows.

It seems to you that in the old days newspapers had more interesting stories on the front page—and not just all this crime and disaster stuff.

It begins to dawn on you that you probably won't become head of the firm unless a miracle happens—and you're not too sure you want the miracle to happen. Responsibility can age a man quicker than anything.

You can still do practically anything you ever did, but half the things you used to do no longer seem worth doing.

All this blather about the youth revolt annoys you. If youth knows what it wants, why doesn't it get it, and if it doesn't know, then why doesn't it shut up?

Each day seems a little longer, each year a bit shorter.

Man Is Killed In Plane Crash Near Elmo, Mo.

ELMO, Mo. (AP) — Leonard Lee Roberts, 30, of Clearmont, Mo., was killed Thursday in the crash of a light plane in a farm field near here.

Roberts was one of two passengers in the Cessna 170. The pilot, Fred William Bever, 53, of Burlington Junction, Mo., and the other passenger, Bailey Hart Kinder, about 50, of Clearmont, were injured. Both were hospitalized in Clarinda, Iowa.

Bever suffered a broken leg and severe head injury and possible internal injuries. Kinder received a broken left hip and cuts on the face.

Witnesses told authorities the plane was flying west at low altitude and circled east before crashing into a field in the northwest corner of Nodaway County, about 2½ miles south-east of Elmo.

In a report to the judges of the Pettis County Court, Glenn W. Irick, state highway inspector, called the quality of maintenance work done on county roads so far "good."

The report showed 39 per cent of the planned improvements had been completed. Approximately 27 miles of county roads are slated for improvements this year.

and fired because they felt their lives were in danger.

The Beacon Journal said a 10-page summary of the FBI report stated that the troops were not surrounded, had not run out of fear and were in no danger of being killed.

The guard said troops were subjected to a hail of rocks thrown by students and that most of them had been injured by thrown objects. The newspaper quoted the FBI report as saying this was not true.

The newspaper said the FBI took the view that the 200 demonstrators heckling the guardsmen could have been dispersed without firing weapons if arrests had been made and more tear gas used.

The U.S. Justice Department in Washington said it had sent a copy of the FBI report to Portage County Prosecutor Ronald J. Kane.

Kane said the report was for use by a special grand jury expected to be called next month to investigate the disorders and that he would give out no information on it until then.

Dr. Herbert Friedman, Dr. T. A. Chubb and researcher Edward T. Byram, all of the Naval Research Laboratory, described their findings in a report to the technical journal Science and in an interview.

Previously, the scientists reported, all the evidence ran contrary to the idea the universe is pervaded by a somewhat warmer form of radiation, called infra-red, whose temperature would be inconsistent with "Big Bang" origin.

Byram said the laboratory is now convinced the infra-red background exists only within our own galaxy—the Milky Way—but that radiation consistent with the "Big Bang" prevails everywhere.

In sending the case back to the city, Judge Hayes said he could not rule on the appeal since no stenographic record of the proceedings was kept at the original hearing.

Presumably, the city will hold another condemnation hearing, this time with a stenographer present.

Meanwhile, the 100 block of West Second is still partially closed, the alley behind the buildings is still filled with rubble and the area, according to Garrison, is still hazardous, as it has been for the past two years.

Jaycees Hear Talk On Drugs

The Sedalia Jaycees heard a professional's appraisal of the drug abuse problem in Missouri at their meeting Thursday night at the Bothwell Hotel.

Mrs. Donna Swartz, information and education specialist with the Missouri Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Program of the Division of Mental Health, Jefferson City, was the speaker.

Explaining the different types of drugs and their effects, Mrs. Swartz said the problem defies pat solutions. Viewing drug abuse as a social problem, Mrs. Swartz said that keeping the lines of communications open is vital to attempting to meet the issue.

She stressed that early training in the home is the most important factor of all in determining whether a youth will take up drugs or not. Once the youth has reached the seventh grade, she said, unless home training has been adequate there is nothing the schools can do.

Mrs. Swartz called the drug abuse problem a rapidly growing one, and said it should be the concern of all segments of the community.

The Jaycees announced at the meeting that they will initiate their SLANT (Student League Against Narcotics Temptation) program soon, aimed at helping youths resist drugs. This is the second such anti-drug effort announced this week. On Thursday the formation of HELP, a cooperative anti-drug abuse effort, was announced by Jack Austin and Mrs. Carolyn Akeman, director and coordinator, respectively.

Diverted Land Is Available To Farmers

The Pettis County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service announced Thursday that land diverted from use by one of the annual ASCS programs will now be available for grazing or taking hay.

Samuel Hieronymous, ASCS chairman, said extreme weather conditions in the county this summer forced the move. Hopefully the return of diverted acreage will prevent farmers from having to buy feed for livestock, he said.

Normally, the land diverted annually under the ASCS programs isn't returned for use until September.

The local ASCS office reports that authorization for using diverted acreage will be granted to farmers for $8 per acre for taking hay and $5 per acre per month for grazing.

Booths Set Up For Petitions On POW's Here

Booths will be set up in at least four busy locations from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday where petitions can be signed in an attempt to urge the North Vietnamese government to abide by the rules of the Geneva Convention in its treatment of prisoners of war.

The drive is led by Mrs. John Mueller, whose Air Force husband is stationed in Korea. She said booths will be downtown at Flower's Department Store and Connor-Wagoner Dress Shop; Consumer's Market in the Thompson Hills Shopping Center, and at Grant's Department Store at the State Fair Shopping Center.

More than a dozen women have volunteered their services in operating the booths, Mrs. Mueller said.

President Heads West On a Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon flew west today in a new President-to-people foray taking him to meetings in North Dakota and Utah with assorted Republicans, one Democrat and leaders of the Mormon Church.

His plane took off from Andrews Air Force base in suburban Maryland at 11:15 a.m. EDT.

Nixon, reactivating the Western White House near his seaside villa at San Clemente, Calif., for about 10 days, arranged stops along his westward route at Fargo, N.D., and Salt Lake City.

The Fargo layover was for a conference with the governors of five upper plains states—North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska.

The Chief Executive, who has said he will consider no partisan undertakings in this election year—at least until October—meets with four Republican governors and one Democrat—host governor William L. Guy of North Dakota.

In addition to Guy, the well-known party lined up at Fargo's Hector Airport included three House members from Minnesota and South Dakota—all Republicans.

The President and Mrs. Nixon's visit to Salt Lake City includes a meeting with the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and other church leaders in the administration building near the famed Mormon Tabernacle.

Before meeting with the churchmen, however, Nixon was to be greeted at Salt Lake City International Airport by Utah Republicans Sen. Wallace Bennett and Rep. Lawrence J. Burton.

Public motorcades were set up in both Fargo and Salt Lake City—a followup to recent successful presidential visits through street crowds in St. Louis and Louisville, Ky.

Since his visit to St. Louis last month, where he received the warmest welcome of his presidency, Nixon obviously had seemed to embark on a calculated travel program around the country to bring him in contact with the populous in, to date, relatively trouble-free cities.

Today also marks the 123rd anniversary of the discovery of the Salt Lake Valley by the Mormon pioneers and is a state holiday. One of the big events will be a "Pioneer Day Stampede," or rodeo, in the capital city's Salt Palace.

The President and Mrs. Nixon promised to witness at least some of the rodeo events.

Weathermen Are Sought

DETROIT (AP) — Federal agents search underground haunts today for 10 of the 13 members of the radical Weatherman organization indicted on charges of conspiring to build a nationwide revolutionary network to bomb and kill.

Some may have already sought sanctuary in Communist countries, said Asst. Atty. Gen. Will B. Wilson, head of the Justice Department's criminal division.

"If they are in the country, we'll catch them eventually," Wilson said in Washington after the indictments were made public Thursday.

Three of the accused were arrested Thursday.

The Weatherman faction broke away from the SDS a year ago.

The following were fined $5 plus costs for license violations: Gary Lee Wilson, 702 East Broadway; Barbara Ann Diehl, Elkland, Mo.; Gary A. Bockelman, 7210 North Heard; Sp. Larry W. Reberry, 322 North Stewart; Barbara Ann Donohue, 400 West Sixth; Mary Bus, 1424 South Sneed; Carl Holden, Kansas City; William James Cramer, Smithton; Robert Slawson, Kansas City; Kan.; Edward Dale Jones, 1411 West Main.

Fined $25 plus costs for careless and imprudent driving were: Philip Ross, Versailles; Darrell Wolfe, Smithton; Rickey S. Morris, 2233 First St. Terr.

Dannie Ray Lunsford, Hughesville, was fined $5 plus costs for improper mufflers.

Leonard Cooper, Kansas City, was fined $100 plus costs for driving while intoxicated.

Walter Henry Murphy, 210 North Washington, was fined $50 and sentenced to 15 days in jail for operating a motor vehicle while his license was suspended.

Recounts Bizarre 'Motive'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The state said today that Charles M. Manson, inspired by a song by the Beatles, ordered the murders of actress Sharon Tate and six others in order to start a "black-white revolution."

"He believed the Beatles were speaking to him across the ocean," Deputy Dist. Atty. Vincent Bugliosi said in his opening argument at the murder trial of Manson and three hippie-type followers.

Sees Lack of Sense of Urgency on Unrest

The Sedalia Democrat, Friday, July 24, 1970—5

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration has failed to recognize that campus turmoil "must be viewed as a national emergency," according to President Nixon's special adviser on student unrest.

Alexander Heard, Vanderbilt University chancellor, said late Thursday that while Nixon had displayed "a searching interest in what we had to say," he was unsure what the White House would do about it.

At the same time, Heard released publicly—reportedly at Nixon's request—excerpts from three reports he had written the President, one of which charged failure to give the student issue proper urgency.

What young persons believe and how they behave "will inevitably shape decisively future life in the United States—and our domestic tranquility this coming September," the memo said.

Heard and his co-workers in the White House assignment, notably Howard University President James E. Cheek, urged the administration pay greater heed to views of campus elements and racial minorities.

Heard noted to newsmen that he and Cheek had met personally with Nixon on several occasions, and "I judge the mission to have been worthwhile."

One memo suggested "that the President and others undertake to understand the fears of 'repression' among certain groups in our country and to understand the realities underlying those fears."

Heard's recommendations, now completed, were not spelled out in full detail in the material available to newsmen.

But they included, in general terms, that the President "increase his exposure" to campus representatives, that he use the "moral influence of his office" to reduce racial tensions, and that he seek additional funds for student aid.

The complete list of recommendations has been forwarded to the President's Commission on Campus Unrest.

Meanwhile, administration spokesmen said a few of Heard's and Cheek's proposals already have been implemented.

Former Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch, now a presidential assistant, said Nixon had assigned him special responsibility for White House liaison with higher education.

Another move advocated by Heard and Cheek, said Finch, prompted an immediate boost from $80 million to $100 million in aid to black colleges from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In a simultaneous development, the Federal Interagency Committee on Education reported late Thursday that of $4 billion in total federal aid to higher education, some 116 black colleges get only $119 million.

Heard's memo which charged neglect of the entire issue of campus unrest was dated June 19. Although Heard took pains in his accompanying statement to explain recent developments, he provided little indication his sentiment had changed.

The memo declared that "We do not believe that our national government really understands that a national crisis confronts us. The condition cannot be conceived as a temporary aberration outburst by the young, or simply as a 'campus crisis' or a 'student crisis'."

"The condition we face must be viewed as a national emergency, to be addressed with the sense of urgency and openness of mind required by national emergencies."

Finch said that Heard "made that point very forcefully, and I think when he left he felt the President did understand."

Heard also wrote that the residual effects of the U.S. move into Cambodia and the campus violence of last May "promise ... to keep issues alive and campuses tense."

"The meaning of May," said Heard, was "a big shove leftward. Cambodia provoked and exposed antiwar and societal discontents among large numbers of students of normally moderate and conservative political viewpoints."

Farm Roundup

'Food For Peace' Plan Has Outlived Its Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — One part of the omnibus farm bill now before the House provides extension of the Food for Peace-foreign aid program, one of the most successful marketing outlets for American farmers.

The program is due to expire at the end of 1970 after 16 years of providing food and economic assistance to more than 100 countries. A variety of financing arrangements have been used, including payments in foreign currencies, long-term dollar credit and outright donations.

Gradually, over the years, Food for Peace—or "P.L. 480"—as it also has been popularized—has changed from its original function as a farm crop disposal instrument to "self help" economic aid and more emphasis on child feeding operations.

David L. Schlechty, an official in the Agency for International Development, writes in the agency's current "War on Hunger" publication that until the mid-1960s food "was almost as free a resource as water and air" in the United States with respect to overseas use.

"Anything that could be done to reduce this surplus," Schlechty said, "including Food for Peace sales and donations, was welcome."

However, because of a number of reasons—including tighter controls on U.S. crop production and a two-year drought in India—this situation was reversed.

"Substantial additional quantities of food were required by India in 1965 and 1966 to avert what could have been one of the most serious famines in modern history."

This resulted, Schlechty said, in "an almost complete draw-down of surplus inventories of grain" in the United States.

Slechty said this combination of events led to the present concept of food aid as a development resource, using funds generated through the contract sales in "self help" programs in the recipient countries.

Since the 1954 act, Schlechty pointed out, Food for Peace has accounted for almost one quarter of all U.S. farm exports and almost one third of all U.S. foreign economic assistance to developing nations.

In the report by President Nixon submitted to Congress recently on 1969 Food for Peace, the 15-year total of assistance under the program was 205.1 million metric tons of commodities shipped, a value of $18.6 billion.

This vast quantity of food aid has included nearly 4.8 billion bushels of wheat; 31.1 billion pounds of wheat flour; nearly 3.4 billion pounds of wheat bulgur; 618.8 million bushels of corn; and various other commodities ranging from dairy products to tobacco.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of honey bee colonies totaled 4,638,000 on July 1, a two per cent decline from a year earlier, says the Agriculture Department.

Except for 1967, honey bee colonies have been on the downswing since 1958, the Crop Reporting Board said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for the fertilizer industry says the public will insist on facts and scientific information in determining what to do about pollution control.

Dr. W.G. Garman, vice president of the Fertilizer Institute, says "without commercial fertilizer we and the world soon would be faced with insufficient land and labor" to produce enough food.

Garman discounted what he called "mythical charges" that fertilizers impair the environment. His remarks were in a speech Thursday at Memphis, Tenn., and released here by the institute.

Plan Boost To Korean Air Shield

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States apparently has agreed to stabilize its air defense of South Korea while reducing American ground troops there this year, according to Pentagon officials.

Their interpretation results from a vaguely worded U.S.-South Korean communiqué issued after high-level talks in Honolulu.

To dispel any doubts about the troop withdrawal, American diplomatic officials said in Seoul Thursday "there is no change" in the announced U.S. intention to move ahead with reduction of its forces in Korea this year.

It is expected the United States will gradually withdraw about 20,000 of the 60,000 U.S. military men now based in South Korea.

Before the Honolulu conference, South Korean leaders said their prime need is help in shoring up air defenses because their air force is outnumbered heavily by a more modern North Korean air force.

According to the conference-ending communiqué Thursday, the American and South Korean delegations "agreed to develop a plan under which certain U.S. aircraft can be shifted to bases in the Republic of Korea from other U.S. Pacific bases."

Pentagon officials indicated this means a number of U.S. Air Force units stationed in Korea on short-tour rotation from the United States, Okinawa and Japan will be supplanted with units assigned to Korea on a longer term basis.

This, it is felt, will stabilize and strengthen the South Korean air defenses.

Army Tank Restricted To Back Yard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Abraham Sheie Jr. wants to take his 7½-ton army tank into traffic. But the highway patrol has thrown up a roadblock.

Pending further negotiations, Sheie keeps his pet in trim by driving it around his back yard—taking care not to knock down the garage or something.

Sheie, a 25-year-old real estate dealer, picked up the World War II vintage M20 for $2,000 at a recent auction of props from the MGM film studio.

During service on the "Rat Patrol" television show the tank had acquired a frivolous cream paint job. It retained its revolving turret cannon, however, and still looked fairly ferocious.

Sheie obtained a temporary permit to operate the tank on the public roads but it was revoked in a hurry when the highway patrol noticed that the 16½-foot behemoth had armor three fourths of an inch thick.

"They were worried I might try to shoot it out with the police chief," Sheie surmised.

A patrolman spokesman says the tank is classified as an armored car and must have an inspection, a license, a legitimate reason for its operation—and a federal permit for that rotating turret cannon.

Sheie's attorney, Horace Comstock, said all this would be ironed out.

Despite his difficulties, Sheie is having a ball with his tank.

He's done some testing and out on the road finds it can cruise at "65 miles per hour or even faster if I get the gear shift figured out." Not much pickup "but who's going to get in my way?"

Sheie plans to rig the passenger compartment with circular seats, carpeting, air conditioning, stereo, television and a telephone then rent the tank out for parades at $100 a day.

"To anyone but violent groups," he says, "I hate war."

Rare Cranes Are Located Close to Fire

CALGARY, Alta. (AP) — The Canadian air force sent a Hercules transport north today with more supplies for troops battling a forest fire which threatens the breeding ground of the rare whooping crane.

Latest reports from the Wood Buffalo National Park in Alberta indicated that the fire was more than 20 miles west of the cranes' 1,200-square-mile nesting region and that prevailing winds remained in a southerly direction. But wildlife officials expressed fear that firefighting activity could also affect the timid birds adversely if the fire drew much closer.

At least 31 of a wintering population of 56 cranes have been reported nesting in the region. Also there are an unknown number of yearlings and young hatched this season. The world's total population of the birds, one of the rarest species of wildlife, is less than 100.

Dr. A. H. Macpherson of Edmonton, western regional director for the Canadian Wildlife Service, sent a biologist to the area to maintain a lookout for any threat to the rare four-foot cranes. Macpherson said the nesting area is largely marshy land through which the fire would have difficulty traveling.

Light rain fell in the park Thursday, aiding fire fighters—the troops, 125 local and forest service firefighters, an Otter plane and two helicopters equipped with water-bombing equipment. But the forecast for later this week is for a resumption of hot, dry weather.

Halt Is Demanded To 'Death Squads'

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The president of the Sao Paulo Supreme Court has asked President Emilio G. Medici to try to stop the "Death Squad," vigilante bands of off-duty policemen who are suspected of executing a dozen persons in the past week.

"Either this is a country with a legal government, or it isn't," said Judge Cantidiano Garcia de Almeida in an appeal to Medici and Justice Minister Alfredo Buzaid. "What we are witnessing is a punitive expedition, which doesn't capture criminals but exterminates them—without appeal, like gods."

Meanwhile police in Recife, in northeast Brazil, said they had foiled a plot to kidnap U.S. Consul Donor M. Lion, 46, of New York.

Lion reportedly knew nothing of the plot until police arrested three persons with a list of 40 political prisoners whose release was to be demanded in exchange for Lion.

Knows Just Enough Electronics

CHANUTE, Kan. (AP) — A young man who had no formal training in electronics and admits he still has a lot to learn about them operates an electronics firm that grossed $6 million last year.

"All of my education has come from associations with other people," says 30-year-old Charles "Bud" Ross. "Now I've reached the point that I might not understand electronics fully, but at least I know what they are talking about."

Ross is president and chief stockholder of Kustom Electronics, Inc., almost overnight a leader in the manufacture of amplifiers for musical instruments.

He used to play guitar in a Kansas City area combo that's how Ross started in business. His first improvements in sound and appearance were with his own amplifiers. Other musicians expressed interest, and he began filling their orders.

"I remember breaking the wooden handle of a keyhole saw I was using to cut a circle in a ¾-inch plywood for speaker," he said. "I didn't have 50 cents to buy a new handle, so I wrapped a rag around the blade and kept on sawing."

In the Kustom Electronics plant at Chanuté says worth thousands of dollars now perform that task automatically. The plant also manufactures such sidelines as police radar units, electronic musical organs and electronic lecterns, more than 100 units a day.

His firm, largest employer in this southeast Kansas community 125 miles south of Kansas City, has 275 employees and retail outlets through more than 700 music dealers in the U.S. and abroad.

Only seven years ago, Ross was putting together his self-styled amplifiers by hand in the garage of his home in Overland Park, Kan., a Kansas City suburb.

He became interested in expanding sales when he realized what a market there was for his merchandise among combo and rock musical groups.

It was not until he was turned down by several music equipment manufacturers that Ross decided to establish a big plant of his own. In 1965, he moved to Chanuté and set up shop with the help of the Small Business Administration and the Chanuté Development Corp.

That year his company lost 36,310. In 1966 net earnings were $36,173, then $169,755 in 1967, $347,064 in 1968, and more than a half million dollars from the $6 million gross in 1969. This year Ross said he expects to gross around $7 million.

He says he always wanted to succeed. "There is a vast difference between someone who wishes to be successful and someone who totally wants to do so," Ross said.

"Business is like anything else. Hard work and concentration. One of the things I have learned is to get by myself in a quiet little place and concentrate. There seems to be an inner self that has the right answer."

He and his wife, Carolyn, have three children.

Draft Reforms Unlikely This Year, Says Rivers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without closing the door on President Nixon's plan to abolish student draft deferments, House Armed Services Chairman L. Mendel Rivers says Congress is unlikely to act on draft reform this year.

Rivers made the statements Thursday at the same time Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird announced draft calls will average below 10,000 a month for the remainder of the year.

The reduction to pre-Vietnam levels was coupled with a statement by Laird that "we are doing all we can to plan and implement a program that will reduce draft calls to zero and enable us to establish an all-volunteer force."

Laird made no prediction when this might happen.

Rivers said a subcommittee review of the entire draft law is already under way, but added he plans no wholesale reform bills this year.

"It depends what the pressures on the President are and whether he needs it," the South Carolina Democrat said of Nixon's deferment plan. "We'll have to find out."

"I don't think we can do much this late in the session," he said.

"I plan no bills this year—but I don't know what the subcommittee will recommend."

In the Senate, Armed Services Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., promised hearings shortly after Nixon asked Congress April 23 for authority to abolish student deferments. But no Senate hearings have been scheduled.

Nixon called the student deferments unfair and said he would abolish them for all young men not already in college that day if Congress would give him the authority.

At the same time, the President urged Congress to begin the transition to a volunteer army when the draft law expires July 1, 1971.

Rivers announced to the House Thursday the draft law review to produce recommendations "for possible future action" was already under way in the draft subcommittee headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La.

But Hebert indicated he is in no hurry to make a recommendation on Nixon's deferment request or any other draft reform.

Energy Misapplied...

One can only speculate over the motives of persons who cut down a 30-foot tree at 16th street and State Fair boulevard, a photograph of which appeared on the front pages of the Democrat and Capital.

One thing certain it was application of misdirected energy that could be channeled into more productive and useful projects in Sedalia.

Consider, for instance, the hundreds of diseased elm trees on a waiting list to be leveled by the city or private property owners.

If the culprits who chopped down the 30-foot tree in an act of vandalism are ever caught, they ought to be assigned to a work detail of legitimate tree removal which is so urgently needed in Sedalia. This they would consider objectionable because of the physical effort required, something not considered applicable when one cuts down a healthy tree just for kicks.

The nonsensical vandalism was reported to have occurred during the night, but more likely during early morning hours of Thursday, either by adults or youngsters. If the latter then this suggests to parents and the police that the curfew law may have been violated.

The other day someone remarked that Sedalia doesn't have any curfew restrictions because youngsters are seen driving around the city at all hours of the night.

Sedalia does have a curfew applying to minors under 17 years of age, specifying it shall be unlawful for any person of that age, "unless accompanied by a parent or other responsible adult, to wander, lounge, loaf, loiter, play in or be in, upon or about any public street, public square, theatre, recreational place, tavern, inn, or any place at or in which people are assembled or to which people commonly resort for business, amusement, pleasure or recreation within the city after the hour of midnight and before sunrise."

Another ordinance prohibits drinking intoxicating beverages on a public street or sidewalk; others specifying it unlawful for minors to purchase or have possession of intoxicating liquor or beer.

Tie these all together either by observing the laws or enforcing them, and there will be fewer adventures involving vandalism in Sedalia, like the nonsensical one of chopping down a healthy tree on State Fair boulevard.

—O—
May Day! Scorpions Loose

One section of the Senate's version of postal reform has a few stingers in it.

It permits transmission by mail of live scorpions for use in research or antivenom production.

Postal employees are protected by packaging requirements. But what about passengers in airplanes, traveling with air mail.

Never fear. Only nonpassenger planes may be used for the scorpions. That's reassuring. A few scorpions loose on a flight to Miami would be more dangerous than a hijacker. Even a hijacker can be reasoned with.

Weight-ing Around

A lower-echelon Department of Commerce aide was being sworn into office recently in Washington in President Nixon's oval office. Although the President was not on hand, other dignitaries were.

Suddenly, the presidential alarm system went off. A Secret Service agent said, "Someone's wearing a gun!" But there was no gun.

Only a weight-reducing belt being worn by a red-faced man, who just happened to be the one being sworn in.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Campaign Funds Under Scrutiny

WASHINGTON — Arch Moore, Jr., the husky handsome Republican governor of West Virginia, promised during his campaign two years ago that he would lift the state out of the quagmire of political scandal.

"We must have integrity in state government," he declared in a deep, righteous voice at his inaugural. "West Virginians deserve honorable government, and I will demand it!"

Yet even as Moore spoke these pious words, he allegedly had salted away more than $80,000 in campaign contributions for his personal use — a matter that the Internal Revenue Service has now turned over to the Justice Department for possible prosecution.

A grand jury is also reopening an investigation into the purchasing practices of Governor Moore's administration. Charges of political payoffs, reaching all the way up to Moore himself, are under scrutiny. His chief purchasing agent, John Bell, already has been indicted for alleged bribery.

Meanwhile, this column has uncovered evidence that Moore illegally accepted several campaign donations from corporations — an offense which carries a $5,000 fine under West Virginia law.

Some of these illegal contributions are actually listed in the campaign finance reports that Moore filed with the Secretary of State. This would indicate Moore is either indiscreet or indifferent about the law.

—Moore's Illegal $1,000—

But he failed to report, and thereby violated another law, at least one corporate contribution. This was a generous $1,000 signed over to him on a company check less than a month before the election.

Looking Backward

Ninety-three Years Ago

Letter to the Editor: — At the Murphy Temperance meeting last night, Rev. Mr. Page told the business men of Sedalia that they must quit drinking whisky or they will fill drunkards' graves "like railroad men."

I have been railroading a number of years and have found railroad men to be average with men in other vocations. Some among us are too fond of the social cup; but when one becomes a confirmed drunkard he forfeits his position just as if he were a lawyer, physician or minister of the gospel.

On the other hand, as is well known to your readers, in the ranks of railroad men are to be found multitudes of the first men of our country, both as regards intellect and social position.

The remarks of the Rev. Mr. Page, albeit his sensibilities may be too obtuse for him to realize it, were a gratuitous insult to a very large body of railroad men of the highest respectability.

Twenty-five Years Ago

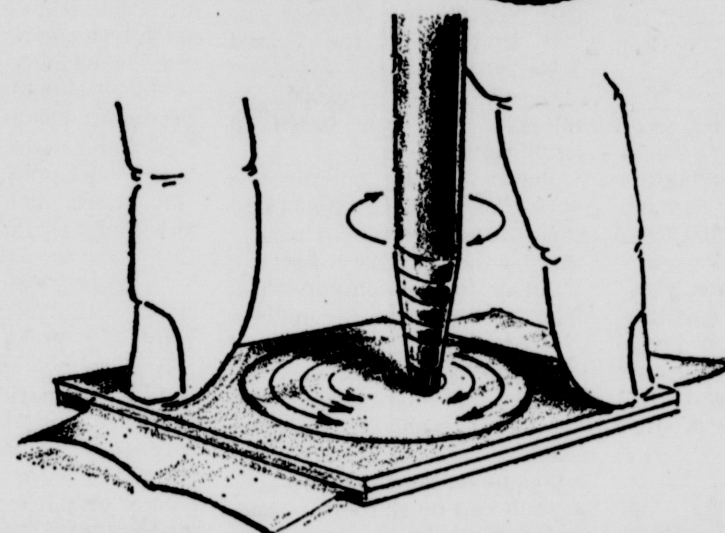

July 24: Apparently Highway 65 could have been used as a griddle on which to fry eggs this afternoon. The highway patrol reported that the pavement had "blown up" at Flat Creek hill south of Sedalia. The mercury had advanced from 75 at 7 a.m. to 98 degrees at 3 p.m.

MONEY CLIPS

by Mort Reed

With few exceptions, most common foreign and domestic coinage is identifiable through a written description. But when, for one reason or another, it becomes necessary to support the description with either the coin or a reasonable impression, the only advisable recourse is the impression. Unless the examining person or firm is known for its integrity in such matters, a coin should never be turned over to anyone.

An impression is the product of one of four different processes—(1) an impression in wax or plaster, which is highly illegal with U.S. currency; (2) a photograph, desirable but in some cases costly; (3) a sketch or commercial illustration, also desirable but dependent on the talents of the owner, or (4) a rubbing, one of the oldest and most popular means of

If the coin in question, for example, is a buffalo nickel, purchase a nickel holder and remove the cellophane from one of the openings. Place the coin on the remaining window with the side to be rubbed up. Center a cigarette paper over the coin and close the holder as illustrated. Hold with the thumb and first finger of one hand and rub the pencil over the paper in a semicircular motion to bring out the impression.

When all of the design possible has been brought out, remove the cigarette paper and run through a copying machine for the number of copies required. Retouch the duplicate print with a fine-line black ballpoint pen to fill in the missing details.

Do not add details that are not on the coin and, above all, do not fill in damage marks transferred to the paper from the coin. The rubbing should be a true copy of the original if it is to serve its purpose in establishing the identity and value of the coin.

If the original cigarette paper rubbing turns out to be a perfect reproduction, the copies will not be necessary. To preserve the details, it may be advisable to spray the markings with an artist's fixative or protective spray. Attach the paper to a 4x5-inch file card with transparent tape and it will be suitable for mailing or filing.

This is the Gordon Greene system of coin rubbing and was sent in by Gordon for the express purpose of passing along to those who may find it the answer to producing coin impressions. It first appeared as an illustrated COINOLOGY panel in the July 22 issue of Coin World.

Some players false-card for the sheer joy of doing it. They follow suit with the queen any time they hold doubleton queen-jack and, in general, their false cards are about as effective as buckshot against a Sherman tank.

The experts also make these blatant false cards on occasion but they do much better when they get a chance to misinform declarer by a delicate series of false-card plays.

It took four false cards by East to trap South but they sure succeeded.

East took his ace of clubs and returned the suit. South went right up with his king, cashed his ace of spades and led a diamond. West went up with his ace and East produced false-card No. 1—the six of diamonds. Nothing sensational, just a quiet six-spot.

West cashed his queen of clubs and East made the quiet false-discard of the eight of diamonds. West led the deuce of diamonds and East continued his campaign of deception by dropping the 10.

South led dummy's deuce of trumps and false-card No. 4 hit the table. East played the nine! South finessed the queen.

As you can all see, South can get to dummy by ruffing his last diamond to take a second trump finesse, but what would you do after East's plays? This South thought awhile and finally decided that East was surely out of diamonds, so that he would be able to overruff dummy. Therefore, South decided that East's original distribution had been 6-2-3-2 and that the play of the ace of trumps would drop East's king.

Nuclear Strength Emboldens Soviet

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A leading national newspaper recently commented: "We all had hoped that since the Soviet Union has gained nuclear parity with the United States it would now be content to move toward something of a detente. In the Middle East, the Soviet seems to be moving instead toward increasingly adventuresome attempts to expand their political and military influence."

Now the surprising thing is that so many men and women should have supposed that as the Soviet Union moved toward nuclear-missile parity it would become less adventurous.

Though this theory has long been held by some vociferous senators, writers and professors, the history of Moscow foreign and military policy suggests the opposite.

From the end of World War II to 1949, the United States had a monopoly on the atom bomb.

In 1946 the Soviet Union made a cautious, tentative thrust into northern Iran. But when President Truman told Russia these troops must leave, Moscow kicked up no fuss. Its troops left.

In 1948, when Western Europe was so weak politically and economically that many thought much of the region might fall to communism (thus the Marshall Plan), the Russians attempted the Berlin Blockade. But (with our nuclear monopoly) peaceful countermeasures were sufficient to break that blockade.

In 1949, the Soviet Union developed the A-bomb. The Russian-backed invasion of South Korea followed.

In 1953, the Soviet Union developed the H-bomb. A buildup of Soviet nuclear forces went on for the next several years.

In 1956, the Hungarian revolt was put down with a ruthless disregard for world opinion and human rights.

In 1957, the Soviet Union developed the ICBM and for the next several years pushed missile development. Soviet confidence was strengthened by President Kennedy's apparent lack of will in the Bay of Pigs incident and by his lack of response to the building of the Berlin Wall which made prisoners of the East Germans.

The Soviet adventure known as the Cuban missile crisis followed. It was aborted because of U.S. nuclear-missile superiority and Kennedy's firmness.

More recently, the Soviet nuclear buildup has been followed by adventurism in the Middle East and military repression in Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet actions also followed a long period of demonstrations of disunity within the United States. These were described recently by Thai Foreign Minister Thaats Khoman as affecting our reliability as an ally. He said this feeling was shared along the length and breadth of Asia. If this is so, presumably this sentiment has been noted by Moscow.

The presidential will demonstrated in the attack on the North Vietnamese military bases in Cambodia was in large effect nullified by the demonstrations of internal dissent which followed in the Senate and on the college campuses.

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Varicose Veins

Occur Mostly in Legs

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q — What causes varicose veins? How can they be prevented?

A — They are caused by a failure of the valves in the veins to check the backward flow of the blood. This comes about as a result of dilation of the veins or collapse of the valves. It occurs chiefly in the legs, especially in barbers, dentists, bank tellers and others who stand in one place for long periods. Heredity and pregnancy are added factors in some persons.

Whenever you must stand or sit for a long time, you should wiggle your toes vigorously at frequent intervals. Don't sit with your legs crossed and avoid wearing tight girdles or circular garters. In spite of these precautions your veins become dilated, you should get elastic stockings or spiral bandages and wear them to prevent a full-blown varicosity.

Q — My daughter, 29, has varicose veins. One doctor advised surgery and another advised some sort of injection. Which is best?

A — Surgical removal (stripping) of the incompetent veins has long been the treatment of choice. Interest in the injection of the veins has recently been revived through the use of sodium tetradecyl sulfate as the obliterating agent and a vastly improved technique. Usually the treatment selected should be the one your surgeon knows best and has had the best results with.

Q — I have varicose veins. Will exercise make them worse? Is there danger of a blood clot?

A — Exercise helps to prevent varicose veins but after they have formed it will neither cure nor aggravate them. Due to the impaired circulation, however, exercise involving the legs is more tiring.

The most frequent complication of varicose veins are phlebitis (inflammation of the veins) with or without clotting and leg ulcers.

Q — Is massage good or bad for varicose veins?

A — Massage will not help them. It should be avoided because of the possibility of dislodging a clot if one is present.

Q — I wear firm elastic stockings because of varicose veins. They are expensive and lose their elasticity after a few weeks. What do you advise?

A — Try using elastic-weave spiral bandages.

"But, my dear, I am a 'social activist.' Your father and I do LOTS of things with our friends."

Three Roadblocks Could Halt Aleutian Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three things might halt plans for underground nuclear weapons tests on the remote Aleutian island of Amchitka: diplomacy, law suit or gigantic earthquake.

Earthquakes are common on Amchitka. A shake just before the test scheduled for autumn 1971 could delay it. But far more damaging to Atomic Energy Commission plans for continued use of the island as a test site would be a big quake right after the 1971 blast.

Testing could be curtailed if agreement is reached at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, or if a group of Alaskans who feel they are personally endangered by the tests won their contemplated law suit.

But the earthquake issue is the big one in scientific circles.

It was raised by a blue ribbon panel of scientists formed to report to the President's science adviser on the potential hazards of underground nuclear tests.

The panel, headed by Dr. Kenneth S. Pitzer, president of Stanford University, studied data compiled primarily by the AEC from previous tests, talked to AEC scientists, then utilizing the expertise of its own members wrote:

"The panel is seriously concerned with the problem of earthquakes resulting from large-yield nuclear tests... new and significant evidence demonstrates that small earthquakes do actually occur both immediately after a large-yield test explosion and in the following weeks.

"The largest of the observed associated aftershocks have been between one and two magnitudes less than the explosion itself. However, there does not now appear to be a basis for eliminating the possibility that a large test explosion might induce either immediately or after a period of time, a severe earthquake of sufficiently large magnitude to cause serious damage well beyond the limits of the test site."

The report went to the White House Nov. 27, 1968, about 11 months before the first of a series of large-yield nuclear tests was to go off on Amchitka.

The panel also gave its opinion of the earthquake potential at the three existing test sites:

"The proposed tests at the central Nevada site involve a greater risk of earthquake than those at the regular Nevada test site since the more northerly portions of Nevada are more active seismically. Since the Amchitka area in Alaska is still more active seismically, the hazard of inducing an earthquake must be considered to be greater at that location than at either Nevada site."

The report disappeared into the White House. Preparations continued on Amchitka.

Finally on Sept. 29, three days before an underground blast in the range of about one million tons of high explosive was to be set off on Amchitka, the Pitzer report was released.

It was included, beginning on page 49, in a 59-page pamphlet that discussed Amchitka test preparations, safety, site selection, the environment and even a sea otter relocation program.

Despite congressional apprehension, the test went off on schedule. No earthquake followed. No radioactivity escaped. Things went better than the AEC had anticipated.

But Dr. Frank Press, head of the department of earth sciences at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a world renowned seismologist who was a member of the Pitzer panel, said: "We all would have bet that nothing would happen. The probability of something happening is small. The risk is very great."

Press pointed out that the AEC has said it plans to set off nuclear explosives of progressively larger yields. He said scientists don't know enough about earthquakes to know whether there might be a certain size shock from a nuclear blast which would trigger a major quake.

The greatest danger from an earthquake at Amchitka would come from the tidal wave it could generate. Press estimated it would take a quake with a Richter scale reading of 7.5 or 8 to generate a tidal wave large enough to cause damage in populated areas. The 1964 Alaska earthquake, one of the largest on record, had a Richter reading of 8.5.

An earthquake that large at Amchitka could send a tidal wave across the Pacific that would devastate coastal areas as far away as Japan.

The AEC answers that there are frequent large earthquakes in the Amchitka area and none has ever triggered a large tidal wave.

Two government seismologists for the U.S. Geological Survey said this month they found in a seven-year study that just as many earthquakes occurred before underground atomic explosions as afterwards.

Their report in a scientific journal had been preceded last year by another report of three different scientists who concluded that underground explosions triggered significant earthquake activity.

Robert D. Jones Jr., manager of the Aleutian Islands National Wildlife Refuge which includes Amchitka, watches with growing frustration the coming of what he calls "the bomb people."

For years Jones has worked to make Amchitka and other islands in the chain more hospitable to the rare Aleutian Canada Goose, as well as to Bald Eagles, and other wildlife.

But the preparations for Canikin, the 1971 test, are eliminating the ground cover and driving off the birds, says Jones. Another factor is the noise and activity.

With its wildlife and susceptibility to earthquakes, why did the AEC settle on Amchitka for its test site?

AEC officials say the choice was narrowed to Amchitka and the North Slope in northern Alaska. According to Dr. Harry Reynolds of the Weapons section of Lawrence Radiation Laboratory in Livermore, Calif., the North Slope was eliminated because of the inhospitable climate although it is seismically stable.

Maj. Gen. E. B. Giller, director of the AEC's weapons division, says another factor was ecological, particularly the presence nearby of caribou calving grounds.

But doesn't the AEC know enough already about detonating nuclear bombs—or devices, as it prefers to call them? Is there any real need for more tests?

"You don't design a weapon and wonder if it will go bang," says Reynolds. The tests are "experiments, a series of experiments."

Not all the devices that the AEC makes go bang deep underground are weapons. Some are handled by the Plowshare program, the U.S. effort to find peaceful uses for nuclear explosives.

John S. Kelly, director of the AEC's division of Peaceful Nuclear Explosives, sees the use of nuclear explosions to release new energy sources as the most promising current Plowshare program.

Such experiments with natural gas and oil shale involve underground nuclear blasts in Colorado. They have popularized a bumper sticker among test opponents that advises: "Visit Colorado, Playground of the AEC."

There are problems, Kelly admits. The first natural gas stimulated by a nuclear explosion was radioactive to an extent that makes it unfit for use in homes. But Kelly is certain the radioactivity can be reduced.

Opponents of such programs worry that economics will dictate a relaxation of safety.

The two companies most involved in this program are CER Geonuclear Corp. of Las Vegas, Nev., and Austral Oil Co. of Houston, Tex. Three officials from these companies recently jointly authored a paper called "Economics of Nuclear Gas Stimulation."

In it they said, "The two gas stimulation experiments performed thus far were so expensive they could not possibly be economic."

Opposition to the gas stimulation project known as Rulison in western Colorado led to the filing of a suit in U.S. District Court in Denver.

Everybody won a little bit. The project was allowed to continue with provision that proper safeguards be followed. But opponents were cheered by that part of the decision which gave them the right to sue a government agency whose activities they felt were potentially harmful.

Directors' Boards Are Called Window Dressing

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A highly successful investor in about 15 corporations was describing the process of making a sound decision when he was interrupted by a listener.

"Don't you attempt to judge a company's investment merits by reviewing its list of directors?" the listener asked.

"Never," the investor snorted. "They don't mean a thing. Maybe I'd look at how many shares they owned because then I'd know something about their commitment. But never just the list of names. They're only window dressing."

To him, boards too often are meaningless. He, at least, has made up his mind, but millions of other investors today are growing more confused about the function and responsibilities of directors.

You can look for a lot more discussion of this touchy subject, especially in Washington, but that doesn't insure any action. Investors have wondered and worried for years and still the matter is cloudy.

The latest reason for reopening the discussion is the Penn Central Transportation debacle, a $2.8 billion enterprise now being reorganized under the bankruptcy laws.

Some directors of that corporation, all highly respected in business circles, revealed they knew little about the precarious financial position of the railroad until, in effect, there was little to do but resign.

Nevertheless, the board of any corporation is theoretically where all the power resides. It can delegate this power and authority to management, but unless the rules have changed, it is accountable to stockholders for that management.

This responsibility has, however, become less clear in many instances.

In some corporations the board's function is little more than ceremonial. Members attend meetings merely to sanction the agenda placed before them by management. Sometimes there isn't time for an intelligent evaluation.

In some companies the boards are made up very heavily of insiders, men and women who already occupy executive jobs with the company and who therefore are hardly objective critics of performance.

Some boards are poorly balanced, either all young or all old, and often without the proper representation of financial authorities—men and women who can understand today's incredibly complex financial statements.

Meanwhile, the responsibilities of board members would appear to be growing rather than diminishing. It is they, for example, who supposedly must shape the response to demands for a new social commitment by business.

Ann Landers

Mom Must Try To Forgive Son's Wife

Dear Ann Landers: Our son Bill, who is 23, went into the service at 18 and married at 20. He has been in a hospital in Vietnam for ten months and will be coming home soon. Six months after he left home his wife had an affair with one of his friends. (Some friend.) Someone wrote and told Bill about it and he nearly went out of his mind. He decided to forgive her and try to make a go of the marriage.

The problem is that I cannot forgive her. I hate the sight of that girl and I never want her to set foot in my house again.

I haven't told Bill how I feel because I don't know what it will do to our relationship. He is my only child and I can't bear to lose him. Please help me. — Covina Heartache.

Dear Covina: Bill is going to have enough to cope with when he gets home. Please don't burden him with choosing between his mother and his wife.

Find the strength, somehow, to accept the girl. If HE can find it in his heart to forgive her, you can. And you must — or you'll wind up on the outside looking in.

Dear Ann Landers: I read an interesting article on unfaithful husbands in a Canadian magazine recently. Reference was made to a couple married 25 years. The man figured he had made love to his wife about 5,000 times. He observed that after 5,000 times, even if it was all chateaubriand, a man might like some cold lobster for a change. Why can't women understand this?

Most men, if they are normal, stray occasionally. A wife who raises hell about it will not look more attractive to her husband, nor will she make him behave better. She will simply wear out her vocal cords, streak her makeup and drive any thought of romance (with her) out of his mind for at least two weeks.

La Rochefoucauld said, "There may be good marriages but there are no exquisite ones."

I know you can't endorse infidelity, Ann, but millions of women read your column and an enlightened approach such as this one could start a trend. How about it? Do you dare? — Battle Creek

Dear Bat: A trend? Toward what? Longer leashes? Sanctioned infidelity? What about a trend for women who might enjoy cold lobster "for a change?" Your letter is interesting, indeed, but it leaves some unanswered questions. When you can provide the answers I'll print them.

Dear Ann Landers: The question was "Confidential" but your answer was a stirring directive for all of us who are frantic and anxious about the state of our country and the disintegrating quality of life. You said, "If you are not a part of the solution you are part of the problem."

That sentence should be worn on buttons, pasted on car bumpers, written on school blackboards and engraved on our hearts. Please repeat it, Ann, and ask the printers to put it in bold type and surround it with a lot of white space for those of us who want to cut it out and carry it in our wallets. Many thanks. — Cincinnati Admirer.

Dear Cincy: Here it is — Complete with your request to the printers:

IF YOU ARE NOT PART OF THE SOLUTION YOU ARE PART OF THE PROBLEM.

Blacks, Whites Exchange Fire In Cairo, Ill.

CAIRO, Ill. (AP) — Exchanges of gunfire between whites and blacks in Cairo erupted late Thursday night but no injuries were reported by police.

A police spokesman said the shooting started about 10:30 p. m. in several sections of town but the largest concentration was at the Negro Pyramid Courts housing project.

The Rev. Mankar Harris, public relations director for the United Front, which has been conducting a boycott against white-owned businesses, said more than 200 bullets were fired in a little more than an hour.

The Rev. Mr. Harris said residents of the housing project, which was blacked out, reported sporadic fire coming in and that some Negroes were firing back.

Police said the cause of the outbreak of gunfire was not determined.

USAC Stocks Return to State Fairground

Don White

Butch Hartman

Roger McCluskey

Dave Whitcomb

Although Saturday's United States Auto Club feature at the Missouri State Fairgrounds will probably not see defending champion A. J. Foyt in the field, it promises to be one of the most competitive area race fans will ever be able to see.

Foyt, who has been the highlight personality in J. C. Agajanian's publicity drive was contacted by that promoter at mid-day Thursday and Foyt said he was sick in bed with the flu.

If anything could be beneficial about Foyt's absence it would probably be the fact that the field should be much more competitive.

Roger McCluskey, Art Pollard, Don White, Jim Malloy, Bill Puterbaugh, Butch Hartman and Johnny Rutherford are only a few of the 40 drivers who will be battling for the fastest 30 positions in the 100 mile stock car feature.

McCluskey, who is the defending champion of the United States Auto Club's stock car circuit, is currently in the lead again this year in his 1970 Plymouth Roadrunner. Two weeks ago he grooved the car to a feature win at Milwaukee in a 200-mile event.

Although not entered in the race, owner Norm Nelson will probably be in the pits. Nelson is semi-retired from USAC's race game, but he does manage to participate in most of the USAC paved track events on the stock car parade.

Nelson is in second place at the present time behind McCluskey in the standings. McCluskey has a total of 2938 points, compared to owner Nelson's total of 2224 for second-place honors.

Foyt, who finished in the runner-up slot last year in the stock car division, is now third in the standings, with a mark of 1890.

Area race fans will probably be keeping an eye on International Motor Contest Association sprint car driver Jay Woodsides of Kansas City to see just how well he can match his talents in a stocker against the big name drivers.

Don White, the all-time leading point-getter in USAC's stock car division is another one of the top-named drivers, who will take the green flag Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m.

The list will contain five or six of the top eight drivers in the USAC stock circuit at the present time.

Agajanian, as well as the USAC officials who will be on hand for the 100-mile feature at the Fairgrounds Saturday feel that the speed records will be on the line.

Ernie Derr, who is the 'dean' of the IMCA stock car drivers, holds the one-lap mark at the track for a late model. That was set in 1967 when he turned in a clocking of :39.90.

Goodbye Baltimore

Cards, Kaycee Continue Current Baseball Skids

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The song of the home stands ended but the melody of defeat lingered on for St. Louis and Kansas City Wednesday night as Houston nipped the Cardinals 3-2 and Baltimore shaded the Royals 5-4.

It was the fifth consecutive defeat for the Redbirds, whose July record is 4-17. And it was the Orioles' 20th straight victory over the Royals.

St. Louis scored twice in the first inning on three singles, a walk and a ground out. Houston tied it in the second when Denis Menke singled, Doug Rader doubled and Cesar Cadeno singled.

Johnny Edwards settled the issue in the fifth with a solo homer off Bob Gibson, 12-5. Jack Billingham, 8-3, limited the Cards to six hits.

Frank Robinson drove in three Baltimore runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly. His home run with a man on in the third was the first off Kansas City pitching in 135 2-3 innings.

The Royals scored once in the first when Jim Palmer, 14-6, balked with a man on third. Palmer gave them another when he walked a man with the bases loaded in the fourth.

Kansas City tied the game 3-3 in the fifth when Bob Oliver and Bill Sorrell hit back-to-back doubles.

Robinson's sacrifice fly scored Palmer in the seventh and the Orioles added what proved to be the winning marker in the eighth on a single by Brooks Robinson and a triple by Bob Grich.

The Royals scored their final run in the eighth on singles by Oliver and Cookie Rojas and an infield out. Pete Richert came in to put out the blaze and got pinch hitter Hawk Taylor to hit into a double play.

Kansas City starter Dick Drago, 6-8, took the defeat.

The teams take to the road today with St. Louis playing under the lights at Cincinnati and Kansas City taking on Cleveland in a two-night doubleheader.

Mike Torrez, 7-8, is to pitch for the Cards against Gary Nolan, 12-4, for the Reds.

Al Fitzmorris, 4-3, and Jim Rooker, 6-9, are to hurl for the Royals against Rich Hand, 3-8, and Dean Chance, 4-5.

Pollard: From Stands to Track

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Medford, Oregon's Art Pollard was an avid spectator at auto races back in the Pacific Northwest for seven or eight years, until he climbed into the cockpit of a modified sedan in 1955... then his racing career behind the wheel began.

"I didn't think there was too much to it," he commented in a dark corner of a Sedalia restaurant late Wednesday night.

Pollard had just returned from his second day of a whirlwind tour of Missouri cities promoting the United States Auto Club's Falstaff 100 at the Missouri State Fairgrounds Saturday.

"I found that there really wasn't much to it," he continued, "even after I turned over on the first lap of the feature. After that, my confidence was beginning to build and I started sticking my foot to the floor; it seemed to all fall together after that."

Pollard had a fabulous career on the Pacific Coast tracks, winning virtually every race he was in, with exception of those in which he had mechanical troubles, of course.

"When I saw that no one was beating me," I decided to go 'big time' and join USAC... I was pretty cocky and figured that I could really show these guys in the Midwest who was who; but it didn't work out that way," he commented frustratingly.

"I was consistent all right... it seemed as though every time I raced, I found myself starting in the back of the pack," he added.

Pollard came to USAC in 1965 and passed his drivers test at Indianapolis the following spring on, of all days, his 39th birthday (May 5).

During his five-year stint with the United States Auto Club, Pollard has only won two races — both of those were last season.

His initial win was at Milwaukee in a Turbo-Offy and the other was at Dover Downs in a Plymouth-powered machine.

Pollard is probably best known for running in the Indianapolis 500. The year he passed his drivers test for the annual national championship division race at Indy, he was bumped, but the following year (1967), he started in 13th position and finished eighth.

During that race he was running third at one point when he spun out in the Thermo King Auto Air Conditioning Special.

In 1968, the STP turbine car broke a fuel pump shaft on the 188th lap and he finished 13th after starting 11th.

In 1969 he dropped a drive chain on the eighth lap and was awarded 31st position in the same STP turbine.

This past May 30, he started on the outside pole position of the second row, but was forced from the competition when his turbocharger caught fire.

Of importance in Saturday's race is Pollard's capability behind the wheel of a stock car. Pollard will pilot one of the 'pony cars' in J. C. Agajanian's 100-mile feature — a Camaro.

This will be the sixth race for the car this year. He opened his stock car season with a second-place finish at Sears Point; during his second race of the year, he was running third at Phoenix when a tire blew and he was forced from the field.

The other three races the car has been entered in saw the 42-year-old veteran fall victim of mechanical troubles.

Pollard has this to say about his 'pony' entry, "it is an extremely good racing machine... and should perform well on the Sedalia track, since the turns are long and the straight stretches are shorter than most other facilities."

Pollard is a partner in the Art Pollard Car Wash Systems, the group that sponsors his cars on the stock car and national championship circuits. The organization is not actually in operation yet, but it will begin that operation in and around the Indianapolis, Ind., area.

After getting a chance to take a look at the Fairgrounds' track Wednesday, Pollard had high praise for the one-mile facility.

"This is by far one of the best facilities of its type anywhere we race...," he commented enthusiastically.

Pollard was one of four men who entered Saturday's stock car race at the Sedalia oval and who had also planned to qualify at Indianapolis Raceway Park that same morning in his championship car for Sunday's road race. But the car is not ready, so Pollard will not make the trip back to Indianapolis.

Three of the entries in the Falstaff 100 are scheduled to qualify at IRP — Jim Malloy, Roger McCluskey and A. J. Foyt.

As it stands now, only two of those three will qualify at Indy (Malloy and McCluskey); Foyt is in bed with a bad case of the flu. Following their qualification, they will fly to Sedalia for the stock car feature.

Foyt, who is the defending champion on the Sedalia track in the USAC event will more than likely miss both races.

In concluding his remarks about his racing career, Pollard has this to say about his life as a USAC pilot: "I enjoy racing, it has been good to me... and it has been my one talent that I could capitalize on."

'I Won't Go Back' Says Houston's Joe Pepitone

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Pepitone hit the high note of his career as a singer—but there was nothing wrong with his punch-line delivery, either.

Joe "I Won't Go Back To Houston" Pepitone slammed out a swinging rendition of "Around The World" and threw in one-liners in the best top banana tradition while appearing on the Merv Griffin Show Thursday night.

The AWOL Houston Astros' outfielder-first baseman appeared along with actresses Eva Gabor and Peggy Cass and singer Julius LaRosa on the CBS-TV show taped for national television tonight.

Pepitone, under suspension by the Astros after jumping the team Tuesday, appeared in a giddy mood before and during his performance.

It was billed as Pepitone's singing debut—but the shaggy-maned Pep corrected an inquiring reporter:

"That's not altogether true," he said, "I sang once on the Mike Douglas Show—but that was impromptu."

Would he consider singing for his supper if his baseball career was washed up?

"Not really, I still want to play baseball," he said, "just not in Houston. I'm not going back to Houston."

Where would he prefer to go? "New York is where it's at," said Pepitone, "I wouldn't mind coming back to New York—either with the Yankees or maybe the Mets."

Walnut Hills Will Sponsor Flag Tourney

Walnut Hills Country Club, west of Sedalia will have a flag tournament for members only, Sunday.

Interested persons must sign up at the pro shop prior to the tourney.

Handicaps will be used for the 18-hole competition.

Flag tournaments are somewhat new in this area. The competition consists of turning in your handicap prior to play and adding it to the par 70 course; then playing the entire 18 holes, seeing which golfer can go the farthest past the 18th hole, but without going over his total score.

The total score is computed by taking the par 70 and adding your handicap to it. Once a golfer has used his allotted amount of strokes, he will mark the location with the flag he received at the clubhouse.

An entry fee of one dollar will be charged for those entering the tourney.

Pepitone had similar troubles while playing for the Yankees before his trade last year to Houston. He was fined several

Marshall Jct. Suffers First Khoury Defeat

MARSHALL JCT. — It took four tries, but the Houstonia Tri-County girls' softball team of Khoury League finally topped Marshall Jct., 11-5.

Houstonia jumped out in front in the top of the first with two runs and added one in the second. But Marshall Jct. rallied to tie the score in the bottom of the second.

Marshall Jct. took the lead in the bottom of the third, but from that point on it was all Houstonia. They netted three in the top of the fourth, two in the sixth and three more in the top of the seventh.

For Marshall Jct., it was their first defeat of the season in the Tri-County loop.

In the three previous outings, Marshall Jct. had won by scores of 17-15 (in eight innings), 16-2 and 19-15.

Houstonia was scheduled for action again Friday night.

Khoury League Will Sponsor Scholarship

Officials at State Fair Community College have announced that the Sedalia Khoury Soccer League will award a soccer scholarship to a young man in this area in order that he may attend State Fair Community College this fall.

The requirements are that the young man must have played soccer in the Sedalia Khoury League. Also, he must fill out an application for the scholarship. The applications will be reviewed by the local Khoury Soccer League board of directors and the scholarship will be awarded on the basis of merit.

Applications may be acquired from the student personnel office at the college. Ralph Huff at the IGA Foodliner or Tom Baker at Hurr's Pharmacy.

The applications for scholarship should be turned in or mailed to Jay Appleton, times for leaving the team without permission.

The 29-year-old player returned to his Brooklyn home Wednesday after several clashes with Houston Manager Harry Walker. In so many words, Pepitone said he was accused of lying about an elbow injury which kept him out of action.

"My arm just doesn't feel right," said Pepitone, "and I'm not going to play with it in this condition. I wanted to give my best to the Houston fans. The fans are just great there. They even applaud when you're not doing well."

"My New York doctor told me I could ruin my career by playing in my condition. I'm only 29, I've still got some way to go."

Pepitone received a $5,000 raise when he went to Houston—but he said that's all been eaten up in fines and lost pay since his suspension.

John Mackey, Baltimore Colt tight end and NFLPA president, said his group was ready for round-the-clock negotiations.

The presidents of the 26 NFL teams sent to each of their players Thursday a lengthy memorandum summarizing the clubs' positions on the negotiations.

The so-called position paper accompanying letter from each team were virtually identical. "Unless existing differences can be resolved, the game as we know it...may well be destroyed," said Max Winter, president of the Minnesota Vikings. "The situation is extremely serious."

And, Art Rooney of the Pittsburgh Steelers, called the stalemate "extremely grave with no visible solution to the impasse."

Mel Kennedy, one spokesman for the NFLPA, said in Washington that the organization was aware of the position paper. "The guys get in touch with us as soon as they get one."

In Washington, Tom Vance, another NFLPA spokesman, telephoned New York at midnight, asked that the 1,600-word position paper be read to him and said the NFLPA would issue a formal statement on it sometime today.

Wellington T. Mara, president of the New York Giants, told his players: "The demands of your association are irresponsible, without foundation in fact, and completely without justification in the present economy of professional football and this nation."

In his prelude to the position paper, Mara said the owners "feel on the basis of questions asked of us that the officers of the Players' Association have not been keeping you (the players) properly informed of the facts of the negotiations."

The final two tourney games will be played Saturday. At 6 p.m., the two Friday night losers will face each other, while the winners battle at 8 p.m. for the championship.

The teams are composed of 12-year-old boys who are not members of the district tournament teams.

Representing the Sedalia American League: Terry Ash, Leland Atteberry, Tim McMullin, Jim Schroeder, Kevin Collins, Calvin Dillon, Brian Rutledge, Robert Trautmann, Steve Koehler, Jim Van Horn, Pat Greene, Rick Homan, Joe Fischer, Jeff Shoemaker, Louis Gero, Chris Kemp and Mike Marcum. The two sides are reportedly more than $17 million apart over a four-year contract.

Contributions to the pension plan by the owners is the biggest stumbling block in the negotiations. Owners say they're presently paying $2.8 million annually to the pension fund and their offer of increases would increase this 60 per cent in four years.

The position paper, translating the pension proposals into individual benefits, projects, assuming a six per cent investment performance, a $690 monthly pension to a player with five years service at the age of 55. The same player, if he waits until he's 65, would get a $1,664 monthly pension.

Players Wonder What is Next

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

Minnesota Viking veterans showed up at training camp for physical examinations but stressed that they had no intentions of actually starting pre-season training until the National Football League contract negotiations are settled.

Mick Tingelhoff, Viking center and spokesman for the veterans, said he was hopeful the negotiating session today in Philadelphia would produce a settlement.

New Orleans Saints veterans, however, apparently aren't as optimistic. A dozen first-stringers, who've been holding bump sessions near the Saints' Bowling Green, Ohio, camp, decided to go home and await the end of the strike-lockout.

Tingelhoff, player representative of the Vikings, said many of the veterans voluntarily showed up for Thursday night's examinations "so we can save a day later." Photographers were barred and Tingelhoff said the veterans didn't want any publicity.

The New Orleans veterans had been working out at a high school football field at their own expense. Al Dodd, acting as a spokesman, said most of the men decided it was getting too costly since the end of the squabble doesn't appear in sight.

Elsewhere around the training camp scene, where only rookies are drilling:

The Baltimore Colts opened rookie camp and 48 were on hand... Bernie Babcock, a free agent tackle from Dartmouth, who also had running back Tom Broadhead, acquired in an off-season trade with New Orleans, and free agent defensive back Steven Brown from Idaho, leave on their own.

The Los Angeles Rams, meanwhile, signed 6-foot-8, 290-pound defensive tackle Lawrence Jarmon, who had been released earlier by the Cowboys... the San Francisco 49ers cut four rookies—running back Stan Blacmon from Jackson State, linebacker Dave Corcoran of British Columbia, wide receiver Bruce Rosenberg of San Jose State and linebacker Steve Stanich of Santa Clara. A fifth rookie, defensive tackle Richard Lee from Grambling, voluntarily left the 49er camp.

And, the Houston Oilers, training at Kerville, Tex., reported that scout Tom Williams had been pressed into service, only temporarily, as a defensive end.

Plute posted a score of 5-0, while Charles was 4-1 winner. Runner-up honors went to J. Nichol in the Class A division, while E. Burnett was the second-place finisher in the Class B event.

D. Plute, B. Larson, C. Rush and B. Harron placed third through sixth respectively in the Class A finals; Class B honors in the same order went to C. Gramlich, B. Hamby, H. Jett and L. Grinstead.

The competition is held each Thursday evening at Liberty Park.

Three Area Tracksters To Participate in Meet

Two Sedalia Track Club stars and one from Warrensburg will represent this area in the National Jaycees Track and Field Meet at Bowling Green, Ohio, July 31-Aug. 1. They were selected on the basis of statewide postal competition.

Klover qualified in three events, the 880-yard run, the 220-yard dash and the 440-yard dash.

Hewett will be entered in the pole vault while Yinger will compete in the discus.

Klover turned in a time of 2:00.4 in the 880, :50.2 in the 440 and :22.4 in the 220-yard events respectively.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Whole Family Can Help With Household Chores

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY AND UNSIGNED—I suggest that you demand some co-operation from your children. A six-year-old can pick up his toys, put clothes in the hamper and at least straighten the bed. A few wrinkles will not hurt until the child becomes more expert. Do not expect to accomplish all this at once if you have never expected anything from them before.

Each year they should do more. The older children could help with table setting, dishes, dusting and other chores, such as putting folded clothes in the drawer.

Sit down with them all and explain that you need help and it is up to each to do his share. Enforce these new rules! Good luck!—HELEN

DEAR POLLY—Unsigned missed the boat by a long shot! I am the mother of five, ages 8 to 12, and we live in a large two-story house on an acre. I have a full-time outside job and still have time to go on picnics and family outings and have an occasional evening out with my husband.

Granted, our house is not spic and span, but it is clean and livable. The secret is "team work." What more can be said? Sign me—A.

DEAR POLLY—I would like to tell Unsigned, the mother of six, how I organize my work so I get it all done and have some spare time. Get out that old pencil and paper and make two lists—one for little jobs and one for big jobs. Under big jobs, list only those time-consuming once-a-week, monthly or yearly jobs. On the other list put everyday things that should be done the next day. Take one big task a day and mark it off when finished. Mark off the little ones as they are accomplished, too. Plan ahead and get the entire family involved.

Dad and the boys can take care of the yard, garage and carry out the garbage. Each child can be responsible for keeping his room neat and straight. One thing that has helped me a lot is that before going to bed I have the children help me "pick up" and straighten the house. It is a great feeling to get up to a neat house and have extra time for some of those big jobs. Above all, take time out to relax or read daily. The work will be there when you are gone. When husband comes home from work spend some time with him and take time beforehand for a bath and look your prettiest—he will love you for it.—MRS. B. H. M.

'Nothing New' in Claims For Peace, Says Nasser

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser says he accepts the latest U.S. proposals for Middle East peace negotiations, but he says they are "only procedural" and contain nothing new.

The proposals, made June 19 by Secretary of State William P. Rogers, call for a temporary Israeli-Egyptian-Jordanian cease-fire of at least 90 days and indirect Arab-Israeli peace talks through U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

In a speech in Cairo Thursday night, Nasser said the same proposals have been made in the past by the U.N. Security Council, and "it is Israel who rejects them." He said he does not expect the new American initiative to achieve any results "because of Israel's attitude and foolishness."

Rogers was reported "very encouraged" by Nasser's response, which Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin transmitted to him.

Israel has not responded formally to Rogers' proposals yet, but Israeli spokesmen have rejected the idea of a temporary cease-fire, contending that it would only make Arab rearmament easier. Itzhak Rabin, the Israeli ambassador to the United States, said in a television interview Sunday that his government favors an "unconditional and unlimited cease-fire."

Nasser, speaking on the 18th anniversary of the revolution that overthrew King Farouk, declared: "We do not want war for war's sake. We want to liberate our land and we want the rights of the Palestine people. We tell Nixon and the American people that we have accepted the American proposals as presented by Rogers."

But he added: "We do not see anything new in them since we have accepted them in the past. It is Israel who rejects them."

He said the Israelis "have thus far refused to mention the word withdrawal, and there was strong opposition in Israel against former Premier Levi Eshkol when he said in a press interview he would withdraw from certain Arab lands."

Nasser reported that during his recent visit to Moscow, Soviet leaders promised to support Egypt "with defensive and offensive weapons to liberate our land."

He acknowledged that "Soviet experts are now with us teaching our soldiers" but said there are no Russians fighting with the Egyptians.

He also claimed he had received "a threat and a warning from the United States that we should accept a cease-fire or else Israeli raids would continue."

He said that "when modern Soviet weapons arrived in Egypt, a fuss was made," but that no American newspaper has mentioned that "Israel has 72 missile bases for defense."

Nasser said the U.S. peace proposal "could not solve anything" unless the United States halts arms sales to Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, who was in Tel Aviv earlier Thursday and told the Russians apparently have not "taken the hint from President Nixon about the danger of a confrontation between the superpowers in the Middle East."

As evidence he cited the recent shipment of Soviet tanks, trucks and other vehicles to Libya about which the State Department expressed concern Thursday.

Eban said Nixon's warning in a television interview July 1 was "one of the gravest threats which has been said since the end of World War II."

A newspaper published in Jordan by the 10 major Palestinian guerrilla organizations rejected the U.S. peace plan today and called for "a mobilization of all our power to foil this new plot by force of arms and by the masses."

The guerrilla groups have consistently rejected any political settlement with Israel, calling instead for Israel's military defeat.

In the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, the toll in a wave of murders rose to five today when the bullet-riddled bodies of two Arabs were found in a Palestinian refugee camp.

The victims, a 19-year-old youth and a man of 50, were found in the Jabalyah camp just north of Gaza City. They had been killed by automatic weapon fire.

Another Gaza man was shot dead Thursday in the Shafit refugee camp. The day before, unidentified gunmen broke into a Jabalyah home, fatally shot a man and wounded a woman, police said. Assaults later entered the hospital where the woman was being treated and killed her.

Police said they were investigating, but there was no word of arrests. There have been 33 murders and eight attempted killings in the strip this year.

Israeli warplanes continued their raids on Egyptian installations across the Suez Canal Thursday. All the planes returned safely, the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three days of Senate hearings into President Nixon's welfare reform plan, already revised once, indicate the ultimate bill may only slightly resemble the administration's proposal.

"This is our best effort," Welfare Secretary Elliot L. Richardson told the Senate Finance Committee Thursday in referring to the administration's proposals.

But the committee, which had already forced revisions after the House passed the original measures in April, made it perfectly plain after Richardson's three days of testimony, the effort was not enough. Hearings resume next Tuesday.

Basic of the administration's proposals is a minimum income guarantee that would provide a family of four with $1,600 a year increasing on a sliding scale until household earned income reaches $3,920.

Elderly, blind or disabled adults would get a minimum of $110 a month.

The federal government would shoulder 100 per cent of cost for the basic benefits, including medicare, food stamps and housing subsidies.

It would pay 30 per cent of whatever more is needed to bring income to the poverty level with the states required to chip in the rest—so long as they don't end up paying more than their current welfare costs.

Total cost of the package in present form in 1972 would be $9.1 billion, almost double current federal welfare expenses.

Critical members of the Finance Committee, both Republicans and Democrats, see two major issues at this point.

First: Another 14 million people will go on the welfare rolls, bringing the total to 24 million. And do the administration proposals offer incentive enough to these people to work their way off the rolls.

After three days of hearings in April, committee members ordered former HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch to rewrite the bill and provide greater incentives.

The administration then came up with some new benefit rates and proposed revamping medicare and the food stamp program, but not until after the Family Assistance Plan becomes law.

"What they did," said one Finance Committee source Thursday, "is tinker at the lower level, taking something away from the very poor and moving it to the working level."

This is a sore point with some liberal senators who say the plan sets too low a guaranteed income floor.

Charts produced at Thursday's hearings by the HEW staff indicated welfare recipients still would suffer a major dip in income when they finally worked their way off the rolls.

Finance Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., said even under the new proposals welfare recipients would be getting "a big bonus for doing nothing."

FFA Will Attempt Rural Improvements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 8,200 chapters of the Future Farmers of America will undertake community action projects this year aimed at making rural America a better place in which to live.

Harry Birdwell, 21, national FFA president announced the campaign today at a breakfast meeting for state officers and members of Congress.

The campaign will be assisted jointly by the U.S. Office of Education and the Farmers Home Administration.

Birdwell, of Fletcher, Okla., said the opening phase will include identification of the wants and needs of communities, analyzing resources available for community improvement and determining how to implement programs.

Followup action may include surveys of land, water, manpower and transportation facilities, job studies, environmental cleanup and health and safety projects.

There are about 430,000 youths—mostly between 14 and 21—enrolled nationally in FFA. The organization is oriented toward vocational education training in high schools.

"We want to make it clear," Birdwell said in a statement issued here, "that students of vocational agriculture and members of the FFA are training for occupations in both farming and agribusiness."

"Because of our expanded interests and the desire of our members to be associated with agriculture," Birdwell said, "we feel it is essential to build strong rural communities where they can live and work in agriculturally related jobs. This will be possible only if jobs are available and rural communities are desirable places in which to live and work."

Birdwell said he expected many other organizations and groups will become active in community projects as a result of the new FFA program.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of ocean transportation for U.S. grain exports of major importance to U.S. farmers has risen sharply this year—in some cases by more than one-third—and may continue going up, says an Agriculture Department economist.

Ocean freight rates for wheat, corn, sorghums and soybeans during the first three months of 1970 averaged 10 to 38 per cent more for foreign-flag vessels than a year earlier and 12 to 32 per cent more for U.S. ships.

Economist T. Q. Hutchinson says in a foreign agricultural trade report issued Wednesday that no relief has occurred.

"The cause of these increases is not apparent," Hutchinson said. "Early indications are that an upward trend has been established and that this trend likely continued into the second quarter of the year."

WASHINGTON (AP) — July prices paid dairymen for Class I milk used for bottling averaged $6.90 per hundredweight at major markets, two cents more than in June and 23 cents more than a year ago, says the Agriculture Department.

Consumers paid an average of 57 cents per half gallon at retail stores surveyed in metropolitan markets, the Crop Reporting Board said. This was the same as in May and June but nearly three cents more than in July 1969.

Prices of home-delivered milk in the city areas averaged nearly 65 cents per gallon, about the same as in May and June but nearly three cents more than a year earlier, the report said.

FIGHTING PORNOGRAPHY LIVERPOOL, England (AP)

— Joseph Devlin, an insurance agent, and John de Polo, a customs official, both with teenage children, have started a Christian Anti-Pornography Group in Liverpool. They called a public rally to urge Christians to act against pornography in movies, theater, television, advertising and literature. Several teenage girls volunteered to help. Roman Catholic Archbishop Joseph Beck of Liverpool is patron of the group.

Paulette Reistad, 1005 Royal Blvd., is working with Pat O'Neil and Associates, Kansas City public relations firm, as part of her studies in public relations at Central Missouri State College.

Miss Reistad, a 1968 graduate of Smith-Cotton high school, recently handled publicity for the Kansas City Grand Prix, held last weekend in Olathe, Kan.

She will be a junior at C.M.S.C. this fall.

Sister Daniel Marie Skubby, elementary teacher at Sacred Heart School, is working toward her master's degree in education at Wisconsin State University at Superior, Wis., this summer.

A mathematics and music teacher at Sacred Heart, Sister Daniel recently completed a work conference on drug abuse.

Named to the dean's list at the school of journalism at the University of Missouri-Columbia for the second semester was Mary Margaret Gunn, 2507 Anderson.

She is one of 214 journalism students to be named to the list. A grade average of 3.0 to 4.0 points is necessary for eligibility.

Rodney A. Robertson, 1815 West 10th, is one of 327 students to be named to the dean's list at the college of engineering at the University of Missouri-Columbia for the second semester.

Other area students named to the list include Jerry Lynn Helms and James M. Nichols, Tipton; Henry J. Coble, Marshall, and Robert A. Brown, Sweet Springs.

TORQUE

IS HERE!
A breakthrough in lubrication science

Scientific tests prove Torque reduces friction and wear.

Method of Testing: Tests were conducted with the "Precision Four-Ball Friction and Wear Tester," a standard apparatus used by vehicle manufacturers, oil companies and other research laboratories to test lubricants. It consists of three precision steel spheres clamped in a cradle with a fourth resting on top forming a pyramid. All four spheres are immersed in a solution of a lubricant being tested. Pressure is applied to the "stack" of steel spheres while the top sphere is rotated. Lubricant temperature, RPM, and time duration are precisely controlled and measured. This test measures two results: (1) Coefficient of friction and (2) the amount of wear. Friction is determined by measuring the amount of rotational thrust on the three balls caused by the rotating top ball. Wear is determined by the resultant scar diameter on the three steel balls.

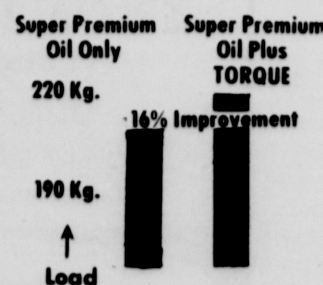

Test No. 1. Friction & Wear— The purpose of this test was to determine if Torque really does improve the lubricating qualities of a super premium grade motor oil. The test was run with super premium grade oil only, then with the recommended mixture of the same oil and Torque.

40kg. Load Force	Super Premium Grade Oil (M-2C101-B)	Super Premium Grade Oil + Torque
Coef. of Friction	0.099	0.088
% Decrease in Friction	—	11.0%
Scar Diameter	.39"	.34'
% Decrease in Wear	—	12.8%

Conclusion:

Torque added to a super premium grade motor oil reduces friction by 11% and reduces wear by 12.8%. Scientific proof that Torque drastically reduces friction and wear. This means more power to your wheels and longer engine life.

Test No. 2 A Run to Destruction— This test is designed to test the film strength of lubricants under the most severe conditions possible. The testing apparatus exerts a load force that is increased to extreme levels until the lubricant fails and the spheres literally weld together. (This simulates the same condition that could exist in your engine when lubrication breaks down under extreme stress and moving parts "freeze.") This test was run at 1800 RPM with increasing Load Forces exerted for 10 second periods until the 4 balls weld. Load forces shown indicate the point at which lubrication fails and steel balls seize and weld together. Super Premium grade oil failed at 190KG Load Force. The same premium grade oil + Torque continued running until 220KG Load Force was Exerted.

CONCLUSION: Under severe "torture" conditions, Torque increases film strength and improves protection over even super premium grade oil by 16%.

Torque will reduce friction in your engine and deliver more power to your wheels or double your money back. Any user of Torque who is not satisfied simply returns sales receipt to Hastings Manufacturing Company for double reimbursement.

Death Squad Active

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Aroused jurists and lawyers in Sao Paulo called Thursday for immediate action against the local branch of the Death Squad which has killed 11 small-time criminals in the past five days.

The Death Squad launched its reprisal executions last weekend after Sao Paulo police investigator Agostinho Gonçalves Carvalho was killed in a gunfight with a local thug.

The Death Squad, a vigilante gang reportedly made up of off-duty policemen, vowed revenge. Between Saturday and Wednesday, 11 bullet-riddled corpses turned up in various locations near Sao Paulo. All were minor underworld figures.

The violence was climaxed Tuesday night when a police posse tracked down Adjuvan Nunes, who was suspected of killing Carvalho, and shot him more than 100 times.

A police officer said later that Nunes was "armed and dangerous."

Judge Cantidiano Garcia de Almeida, president of the Sao Paulo Supreme Court, said: "We plead for the authorities to remedy this situation—urgently." He sent the appeal to President Emilio G. Medici and Justice Minister Alfredo Buzaid.

"What we are witnessing is a punitive expedition, which doesn't capture criminals but exterminates them—without appeal, like gods," said the judge.

"Either this is a country with a legal government, or it isn't," he added.

Nelson Fonseca, chief criminal judge of Sao Paulo, told newsmen: "The members of the Death Squad are policemen... and everybody knows it."

Threatens Shutdown Of Plant

Donald Raines, manager of the Brown Trailer division of Clark Equipment Co., North Grand and Highway 65, said he would shut the plant down if recent acts of vandalism continued.

Raines said roofing nails have been put in the company's driveway, acid thrown on a car and his son run off the road by another car.

"One more serious incident and Clark will close this plant and move out of town rather than get anyone hurt," Raines said.

Members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers have been on strike at the plant since July 15.

Another meeting between the union and Raines has been tentatively set for next Monday afternoon. Federal mediator Bernie O'Keefe of St. Louis is expected to attend the meeting.

Donald L. Wilson, an employe relations manager with Brown Trailer's home office in Michigan City, Ind., is in Sedalia to aid in negotiations. Wilson said the workers have been offered a 66-cent per hour wage increase over a two-year period, but turned it down.

According to Raines the strike has affected 75 per cent of the first shift and 35 per cent of the second shift at the plant.

Warrensburg Plant To Stop Operations

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARRENSBURG — Town & Country Shoes, Inc., plans to close its production facility here, it was reported Wednesday, in what the company said it hoped would be a "temporary" action.

The basic reasons for the action, T & C representatives said, were the present economic squeeze, increases in shoe imports and "a very poor shoe retail business."

The company opened its Warrensburg facility about 25 years ago and employed 310

Death Causes Unrest

The body of Rick Dowdell is carried from a church in Lawrence, Kan., Thursday following funeral services. Dowdell was shot and killed by police a week ago, causing unrest in the town. Another youth, Nick Rice, was shot and killed during a confrontation between police and "street people" near the University of Kansas campus July 20. (UPI)

Restraint Plea, Militant Declaration During Funeral

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Militant declarations by young blacks and a plea for restraint by the Rev. A.N. Larkin were made Thursday during funeral services for Donald Rick Dowdell.

The 19-year-old Negro, first of two youths killed during a week of crisis in this university city, was shot July 16 by a Lawrence policeman, William Garrett. A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday that Garrett acted in the line of duty.

Private funeral services were set later in the afternoon in Kansas City, Mo., for Harry Nicholas Rice, 19, a white youth killed Monday night during a confrontation between police and a group of young persons near the university campus.

Dowdell's body was borne to the St. Luke's African Methodist Episcopal Church by an old farm wagon drawn by two brown Shetland ponies. A procession of about 150 persons marched behind the wagon on its route over downtown streets where many white citizens stopped and bowed their heads as the cortege passed.

Three persons spoke at the church, filled by an estimated 450 persons. Ten Whites were present, including three newsmen.

The speakers were the Rev. Mr. Larkin, pastor; Father Lee Benefee, an Episcopal priest at the Panthers' Den, a recreation-educational center sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese

Establish Program To Aid Drug Users

Recent drug abuse stories in The Democrat apparently encouraged a group of Sedalians to establish "a help, not punishment" program here.

The organization will be known as HELP and is headed by Jack Austin, director, and Mrs. Carolyn Akeman, coordinator.

When asked what the specific goals of the organization were, Austin said, "It's designed right now at hitting the drug problem. We can't say for sure that it'll solve the problem, but it can't do anything but help."

According to Austin, the organization will operate on a 24-hour basis and will rely on volunteers to provide professional advice in areas related to law, medicine and religion.

"Tentatively, its location will be in a local church," Austin said. "It will be staffed by at least five ministers, three or four attorneys and three or four doctors," he said. All of them would be on a volunteer basis, with at least one representative of each profession on "call at all times," Austin said.

"Our program is just what it stands for, help, not punishment," he emphasized. Although the primary goal will be to offer assistance to youths attempting to break the drug habit, the organization will be available to people of all ages, Austin said.

"These kids don't have to be afraid of us because we're going to be there to help," Austin said.

The HELP program officially opened today, according to Austin. "After the last item in the paper, (quoting parents whose children have used drugs) we decided it was time to get moving," he added.

Assistance could be obtained by telephoning 827-2439 or 826-1312, Austin said.

Force Paratroopers To Abandon Base

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. paratroopers were forced to abandon a mountain base in the north Thursday by massed North Vietnamese, whose incessant fire had killed 61 Americans and wounded 345 in the area in three weeks.

The single heaviest blow fell Wednesday, less than 24 hours before the abandonment of Fire Base Ripcord. Twelve members of a paratrooper patrol were killed and 51 wounded in a 6½-hour fight a mile away. It was the largest U.S. loss in one battle in more than two months.

Faced with mounting casualties, the Americans had a choice of heavily reinforcing or pulling out, informants said.

Three Americans were killed and 20 wounded in the morning-long evacuation under enemy fire. The paratroopers were reported to have blown up some of their big guns and other equipment to keep them from falling into enemy hands.

A large troop-transport helicopter was shot down but spokesmen said no one aboard was hurt.

Ripcord opened 3½ months ago and was under mortar and rocket siege since July 1. It is 13 miles east of the Laotian border in mountainous jungles about 400 miles north of Saigon.

Troops of the 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade, operating out of Ripcord, screened enemy infiltration routes leading from Laos to South Vietnam's populous northern coastal area, which includes the old imperial city of Hue, 25 miles east of Ripcord.

The withdrawal was made, the U.S. command said, under North Vietnamese mortar, machine-gun and small-arms fire, and was completed shortly after noon.

The paratroopers, including units based at Ripcord and operating in the region around it, comprised elements of two battalions, a U.S. spokesman said. Enemy losses around Ripcord were unknown. But a U.S. spokesman said "evidence indicates the North Vietnamese army suffered very heavy casualties and materiel losses." He added that the enemy was constantly pounded by U.S. bombers and artillery.

The decision to pull out apparently was intended to avoid the sort of criticism that arose in the United States after the Marine base at Khe Sanh farther north was abandoned in 1968 after a 77-day siege.

The criticism then was that U.S. troops were allowed to become involved in a defensive position. The U.S. Command may have had this in mind when it said: "Ripcord's closing will provide additional troop units for offensive operations against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong."

The U.S. Command reported 66 Americans were killed and 619 wounded in action last week, down from the previous week's total of 72 killed and 729 wounded.

South Vietnamese headquarters listed 321 of its troops killed and 792 wounded, while the allies claimed to have killed 1,338 enemy soldiers.

The figures raised U.S. casualties in Indochina since Jan. 1, 1961, to 43,057 killed and 284,933 wounded. South Vietnamese war losses stand at 110,919 killed and 233,696 wounded. Enemy deaths for the war are put at 658,100.

On the Cambodian front, reports reaching Phnom Penh indicated that reinforced North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops had all but surrounded several Cambodian bat-

District of Columbia Anticrime Bill Passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed Thursday after more than a year of controversy a broad-scale anticrime bill for the District of Columbia, which President Nixon described in his 1968 campaign as "the crime capital of the world."

The vote was 54 to 33.

The administration-backed measure provides for preventive detention, no-knock police searches, mandatory minimum sentences, court-approved wiretaps by police and other sections assailed by opponents as repressive and a violation of constitutional rights.

But it provides also for a complete reorganization of the local courts, more judges, an expanded bail agency, a public defender system and other steps on which there was general agreement.

The bill, passed by the House last week by a 332-64 vote, is one of 13 crime control measures that Nixon has been prodding Congress to act on—and the first to be sent to the White House for his signature.

In its final form, the bill is a compromise worked out by Senate-House conferees from separate measures previously passed by both branches. The conferees negotiated for three months before reaching agreement.

No one disputed the need for anticrime legislation for this capital city, where more than 56,000 felonies were reported last year including 7,071 armed robberies, 287 murders and 336 cases of forcible rape.

Opponents tried in vain to persuade the Senate to reject the bill, saying it could then pass a separate measure embodying court reorganization and other noncontroversial features of the legislation.

But Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., floor manager of the bill, said that if the Senate didn't pass it there would be no crime control measure for the District this year.

Most of the Senate controversy centered on the preventive detection section under which defendants charged with certain dangerous or violent crimes could be held for trial without bail for up to 60 days if a judge found, after a hearing, that

Tear Gas Bombs Explode In House of Commons

LONDON (AP) — Tear gas bombs exploded Thursday in the House of Commons, smothering the ancient chamber in acrid smoke. They were hurled from the visitors gallery by a young man who cried: "Belfast. See how you like it!"

Members, eyes streaming with tears, fled and the house was closed down indefinitely.

Two bombs bounced and rolled on the floor of the vaulted chamber, spewing clouds of dense smoke and touching off two small fires.

Attendants grappled with the young man as he waved his arms and shouted. Visitors scrambled back from the struggle.

The man was not immediately identified. His angry words apparently referred to the tear gas used by British troops in quelling rioting in Belfast, capital of Northern Ireland, during the last year of feuding between Protestants and Roman Catholics.

Robert Mellish, chief whip of the Labor party opposition, said: "It was right under my feet, the first one. I thought it was a hand grenade."

"I ran. I went like a bomb. I wasn't going to read about my bloody obituary in the Times."

That first bomb squirted under the Labor opposition front bench. The second came near it. The twin explosions touched off a fire.

Preliminary Hearing In LSD Case

Albert E. Chidester, Jr., 19, was bound over to Circuit Court by Magistrate Judge Frank Armstrong following his preliminary hearing Thursday morning on narcotics charges.

Chidester was arrested June 1 by Sedalia police and charged with unlawful possession, sale and transportation of LSD.

In testimony Thursday Fred Peterson, Sedalia, said he purchased a "Yellow Sunshine" tablet from Chidester for $3 June 1 and later turned the tablet over to police.

Sgt. Perry Franklin testified the tablet Peterson gave police was sent to Jefferson City for examination. Highway patrol chemist Charles Durham testified the tablet was LSD.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney John McClosky, Peterson said he bought the drug from Chidester because an unidentified friend "wanted to see Chidester in jail." Peterson also testified that he was reimbursed for the money spent on the drug.

The preliminary hearing was Chidester's second. Circuit Court ordered the new hearing after learning that Chidester did not have an attorney at his first.

Chidester is being held in Pettis County jail in lieu of $15,000 bond.

snuffed it out with their jackets while others carried the mace, Symbol of the ancient authority of Parliament, from the chamber.

Aside from streaming and reddened eyes, fast-beating hearts and lungs sore from coughing, no one was hurt in the rush to get out. Even 69-year-old Dr. Horace King, speaker of the House on the dais at the front of the chamber, escaped from his seat with the help of attendants.

Due for debate later in the day was the case of Bernadette Devlin, member from Northern Ireland now serving a six-month prison term for rioting and inciting to riot during Catholic-Protestant violence.

Miss Devlin, the youngest member of the House at 23, wants to be brought to London to be sworn into the new Parliament. Northern Ireland officials have refused.

'Kit' Bond Criticizes Auditing

"The state of Missouri has apparently given up on auditing fee license offices," Christopher (Kit) Bond told the Republicans For Improvement Club Thursday at Holiday Inn.

"The Department of Revenue last week said it will not begin auditing the 151 privately operated offices throughout the state where motor vehicle licenses are sold for the ridiculous reason that the Legislature did not appropriate money for four station wagons," Bond said.

Bond, Republican candidate for state auditor, pointed out that the auditor is responsible for auditing fee offices. "Because of shortages and irregularities in several fee offices across the state, the Legislature and the Department of Revenue have lost confidence in the ability of the state auditor to provide an effective check on these offices."

"The Legislature, in spite of lack of funds for state government, authorized the hiring of four auditors under the supervision of the director of revenue. Now, the director states he will not use these auditors because no money was appropriated to buy station wagons for them to use in picking up licenses," he said.

"It is not an auditor's job to pick up licenses. He has a professional responsibility to see that state funds are handled properly. License plates can be returned by mail or by public transportation," Bond added.

"The solution to fee office problems is not more station wagons; it is a program of regular audits by examiners in the state auditor's office. I will see that professionals watch these offices carefully to discover any mishandling of funds or diversion of funds to private use," he concluded.

Vandals' Work

This 30-foot tree at 16th and State Fair Blvd., was cut down by vandals sometime during the night. As a result, the Sedalia Park Department is offering a $100 reward for information leading to the apprehension of the person responsible. Jack Coutts, superintendent of parks, also reported that a shelter house screen at Hubbard Park had been damaged.

More Legion History

The most extensive history of Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion, appeared in the Democrat-Capital Sunday, July 12, 1970 preliminary to observance of the 51st anniversary of the organization.

Considerable research was involved by Joe Toler and other members in compiling this information for a feature story by Miss Hazel Lang. However, the article appeared incomplete. Somehow nine paragraphs were not composed from the original copy which when retrieved was found stapled together in proper order; another case of gremlins playing tricks.

To accommodate current and succeeding generations of history buffs we are herewith publishing the omitted material and suggesting that Legionnaires clip and attach it to the July 12 article for preservation; and that librarians further update their card index. Otherwise 100 years from now the information may be hard to come by. Here is the insert after paragraph seven of the original article:

"There have been hard knocks along the way during the past 51 years for Post 16 of the American Legion. Among them was the Fourth of July picnic at Liberty Park with fireworks, a dance and a show, all handled by a promoter who collected nearly $3,000. He used a borrowed car from Ford Motor Co., and on July 2 skipped out, taking all of the money and the car. But the Legion had promised a picnic and that was what they had, although they were several years paying the debt. Another time the Legion lost quite a sum of money on a rodeo at the Fairgrounds.

Typical of the World War I infantryman, the doughboy which stands in front of the court house, was erected in 1927 after the new building was built when the old one was destroyed by fire June 16, 1920. On the monument are names of those who were killed in World War I. Inside the courthouse the Legion has a list of those who served in World War II.

Relic of War

Brought over from Germany after World War I, was a German cannon, which stood on the east side of the courthouse. It was made of finest steel, a real graphic memento of World War I. Then when World War II came, the government called for all the scrap iron and steel it could get, so the Legion offered its cannon. The government replied that it could not accept it as a gift, but instructed the Legion to sell it to a junk dealer and the government would buy it from him.

At that time the junk dealer was Bertman Salvage Co., Main and Vermont, to which the cannon was sold for $25. It was put on a truck and hauled to the junk yard, where it was cut up by Henry Fredeback, who was a welder. The cannon weighed exactly 20,000 pounds and was taken from the courthouse on June 21, 1942. The Legion had paid a $300 freight charge to bring it from New York City to Sedalia.

This patriotic organization of men who still love the flag for which they fought donated a flag pole to the courthouse, to Bothwell Hospital, for Liberty Park Stadium and the State Fair Community College. In 1934 they gave American flags to every school in Pettis County.

Donated By Legion

The first showcase in the Pettis County Historical Museum at the courthouse was donated by the American Legion when J. L. Curry came to them and asked the Legionnaires to help get the Historical Society started by purchasing a case in which to display World War I relics.

At the fairgrounds there is a railroad car which was shipped to the Legion Post from France. It is typical of railroad transportation they used over there. These cars were supposed to hold eight head of live stock and 40 people, so the car was called 40 and 8, and from this came the name of a veteran's organization.

In 1942 the Legion's auxiliary police was formed, and has been active since that time working with the Sedalia Police Department when and where needed.

The Legion sponsored two baseball teams, the Juniors and Seniors, in 1945 and 1946. When they needed transportation, the Legion purchased a Ford 28-passenger bus."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Soviet Fears Abrupt Withdrawals

WASHINGTON — Behind the official confusion over the prospects of negotiating Vietnam truce, this much can be said:

President Nixon has been telling intimates optimistically that he expects to be able to speed up the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam. This will be evidence, he has boasted privately, that the Cambodian operation will help to end American involvement in the war.

— There is evidence that Soviet leaders concluded some time in mid-May that President Nixon is serious about pulling out of Vietnam. They reportedly fear that an abrupt American withdrawal might open the way for the Red Chinese to move into the vacuum. Soviet leaders have shown interest in negotiating a peace that would prevent any sudden disruptions, which the Chinese might exploit to their influence.

— Intelligence reports indicate that the Soviets have brought new pressure upon Hanoi to accept a gradual U.S. pullout. The Kremlin reportedly has offered to help the North Vietnamese build a peacetime economy in return for settling the war. Hanoi's leaders can hardly ignore the Soviets who supply 80 per cent of the war goods.

— India's Ambassador to Hanoi, Dr. K. S. Shrivankar, disclosed upon his return to New Delhi that the North Vietnamese might be willing to convene an international conference, such as the 1954 Geneva conference, to seek an Indochina solution. He added that Hanoi insisted, as a precondition, upon the withdrawal of American troops from Indochina. Still, the first hint that the North Vietnamese would agree to peace talks in return for a bombing halt came from the Indian ambassador in 1968.

—Dinosaurs of the Sea—

Like the dinosaurs that once stalked the earth, the great whales — the dinosaurs of the deep — are headed for extinction.

Yet Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel has been pressured by the whale oil lobby to suspend an import ban on whale oil. He ordered the ban only last month to reduce the slaughter of sperm, fin and sei whales, the three main breeds of the diminishing sea mammals.

Conservationists have warned the International Whaling Commission that whales are being butchered faster than they can reproduce. The commission has been urged by its own scientists to reduce the world whaling quotas by 240 per cent.

But the commission, unhappily, is dominated by whaling interests, which are more concerned about profits than conservation. Whale oil is used for transmission fluids and to lubricate watches. The meat from the giant carcasses is ground up for dog, cat and chicken food.

Hickel took unilateral action last month to ban imports of oil and meat from the main species, hoping this would slow down the slaughter of whales.

Two big importers, Archer-Daniels-Midland and Werner G. Smith Inc., hired the powerful Washington law firm of Covington and Burling to crack Hickel's import ban.

They got the backroom support of the State Department which, putting diplomacy ahead of conservation, wanted to appease the whaling countries. Japan, in particular, butchers whales for the American market.

Hickel also received a snippy private letter from Dr. J. L. McHugh, the American delegate to the International Whaling Commission, who protested that the ban was "not justified."

A weary Hickel, a two-fisted ex-boxer who stood up to President Nixon over his attitude toward youth, buckled under the pressure from the whale oil lobby. He has quietly ordered subordinates to draft a 30-day suspension of the import ban.

This will give American whale merchants a chance to sign new contracts, leading to a resumption of the slaughter to feed transmissions, dogs and cats.

Terrorists' Voice Is More Strident

By LEON DENNEN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (NEA)

As President Nixon warned, Moscow's military build-up in Egypt and naval expansion in the Mediterranean has upset the balance of power in the Middle East and increased the danger of an East-West confrontation.

But Russia's traditional imperialism in this strategic oil-rich area—as aggressive under the commissars as it was under the czars—is not the only obstacle to an Arab-Israeli settlement.

Much of the difficulty also lies in the fact that the maneuverability of Egypt's President Nasser and Jordan's King Hussein is steadily narrowing. Increasingly restricted by the growing belligerence of the Palestinian guerrillas, Nasser and Hussein can no longer negotiate freely with Israel for fear that the Palestinians and their revolutionary allies in most Arab countries will turn against them.

U.S. policymakers therefore regard as unrealistic any peace proposals that continue to ignore the emerging Palestinian national consciousness. This is also increasingly the view of influential Israelis.

According to Prof. Shlomo Avineri of Jerusalem's Hebrew University, Israel should state clearly that she will deal with the Palestinians in the same way that she is ready to negotiate with any Arab government. "The conflict between Israel and the Arabs that arose in historic Palestine can come to an end if both protagonists will accept each other's legitimacy," Avineri wrote in the magazine Commentary.

In his view, Israel should agree to negotiate the return of most of the territory she occupied in 1967 on the west bank of the Jordan to an independent state of Palestinian Arabs. She could then assist in an international move to solve the refugee problem.

A solution along these lines was implied in recent statements by Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban and even by the more hawkish Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

The idea of an Arab state on the west bank is not new. It was first proposed by the United Nations resolution of 1947 that partitioned Palestine and created the State of Israel. Little has been heard of it since the Arab-Israeli war of 1948 when King Abdullah's Arab Legion seized the west bank and annexed it to Jordan.

But the Palestinians never really accepted Jordanian sovereignty. Abdullah was assassinated by a Palestinian Arab in 1951 at Al Aksa Mosque in Jerusalem in the presence of his grandson Hussein, then 16. Young Hussein, himself the target of frequent assassination attempts by Palestinian terrorists, has been sitting on a shaky throne ever since.

Creation of an independent Palestinian state on the west bank will drastically cut the size of Jordan. But Hussein will be forfeiting an area where the overwhelming majority are Palestinians and over which he never had any real control.

However, a settlement that involves a new Arab state is in the cards only if the moderates among the Palestinians come out on top. So far the terrorist guerrillas have the upper hand and their solution involves the total destruction of Israel.

Influential Arabs on the west bank—lawyers, doctors, merchants, landowners and even moderate politicians—might have the courage to negotiate with Israel once the United States and Russia settle their own differences.

As Avineri said, if peace with all the Palestinians is impossible at the moment, there is no reason why Israel should not try to reach an understanding with some of them.

"I have never played contract" said the old man, "but if you need a player until your partner arrives, I will do my best. Just let me sit South."

The president of the club, whose partner had been delayed, sat North while the best pair in the club picked up the East and West cards.

"They give a bonus for bidding a game, don't they?" asked the old man. "I'll bid four hearts."

North raised to six. Expert West was tempted to double but restrained himself. He opened the king of diamonds. The old man ruffed, spread his hand and said, "Six bid and made."

There was a howl from East and West. The director was called and the old man explained. "I'll start by drawing trumps." That took four leads and the ace of clubs was discarded from dummy. Next came the leads of the king and queen of clubs, in order to get rid of dummy's ace and king of spades.

"All I will lose is a spade trick. Right?" he asked.

Just then the president's partner arrived. He looked at the stranger quizzically. "Don't I know you?" he asked.

"Of course you do. I'm Z. I used to sit South in all the bridge articles in the days of auction. Many's the time you were my partner under the name of Y. How we used to clobber poor A and B, just as North and South tend to clobber East and West since taking over our positions at the table. I have never learned contract but I guess I can still handle dummy play."

Z certainly could and still can. Just try to make the contract without doing some jettisoning of dummy's high cards.

Why go to Vegas to gamble, when all you have to do is get out on the freeway?

One way to prevent indigestion is to shun the place where we eat lunch occasionally.

If the company ballpoints get any worse we're going to buy our own—which is probably just what the purchasing agent has in mind.

Q — I have diverticulitis and have to be on a bland diet. As a result, I am losing weight. How can I gain weight and still stay on the diet?

A — A bland diet is one that contains a minimum of roughage and other gastro-intestinal irritants. Taken in quantities that more than balance your expenditure of energy, you are bound to gain weight. Try eating at least one egg, two cubic inches of cheese, three cubic inches of margarine and four glasses of milk a day, in addition to bread, cereal, custard, blanc mange, ice cream and cake.

If you are not gaining, increase the size of the portions. It may be hard to get so much food down at first but, as you start to gain, your appetite should improve.

Q — I am a woman, 42. My doctor says I have Turner's syndrome. Would this cause me to have premenstrual headaches?

A — Turner's syndrome or gonadal dysgenesis is a congenital ovarian deficiency. Headache is not a characteristic complaint.

Ted and the Theatre

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Another hometown boy makes good. Ted Walch, youngest son of Harry W. Walch, 711 W. Broadway, Sedalia, has become well established in the theater world. He is the founder and director of St. Alban's Repertory Theater, preferably known as SART. SART is definitely a professional repertory with professional actors and actresses although it is aided by and associated with St. Alban's, the prep school on the grounds of the Washington Cathedral.

This is Ted's second season with SART. Last year he tried all new plays, which he felt were not too popular with the audience. This year he is doing four in a classic category: "Mary Mary" a comedy by Jean Kerr, "The Glass Menagerie" by Tennessee Williams, Samuel Beckett's "Endgame" and "Act Without Words," and Strindberg's "Miss Julie." All performances have had good reviews in the Washington press.

I met Ted and his brothers at their home in Sedalia when he was about twelve, and he stole the show then as he does now at 28. He is still the same winsome personality as he dashes around his business offices and the repertory theater at St. Alban's.

His preparation for the theater goes back to his days at Smith-Cotton High, then on to Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio; Yale School of Drama; and finally Catholic University of Drama here in the capital in 1966. Father Hartke, head of the C.U. drama school, said, "Ted Walch is one of our outstanding graduates, a very talented and delightful young man." Ted was selected to stage manage a tour in '66 (which gave him his degree from Catholic U.) under the auspices of the Department of State which performed Eugene O'Neill's "Ah! Wilderness" in Israel, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, England and Ireland.

On his return from the tour, Ted joined the faculty at St. Alban's. He teaches English and drama to juniors and seniors. He cooperates with teachers at the National Cathedral School for Girls and his classes are now coed. During the next school year his courses will be in Contemporary Drama and Shakespeare. He directs three school plays during the year which are performed in the St. Alban's theater.

Ted is determined that the theater will never be idle. So in addition to his repertory group he conducts a theater school. Its members are mostly ghetto children on scholarships between the ages of 15 and 20.

Before coming to St. Alban's he directed a professional theater at Kenyon, his alma mater. He recently met with Prime Minister Olaf Palme of Sweden, another Kenyon alumnus, on the Prime Minister's Washington visit to discuss a Swedish play which Ted hopes to direct.

In 1967 Ted made a great hit as Archy in "Archy and Mehitabel" with the Garrick Players in Georgetown.

During what he called a gap in 1968, Ted was given a grant to study the possibilities of creating a repertory at St. Alban's. The Board of Governors had $100,000 to spend but they were not going to make such an investment without a serious plan. Ted met regularly with the Board and convinced the members that it could be done.

SART opened with a bang last summer with a benefit performance and personal gifts which netted $35,000. The British Ambassador and Mrs. Freeman gave a big reception. The Harry Walches came for this event. His theater school that year raised $25,000. This year there is no private solicitation. Ted said, "Too bad we can't sell some tickets in Sedalia."

Ted lives with his golden retriever dog at 3249 M Street. He says the hippies there are losing ground. He sees his brother Stanley from St. Louis, who comes to Washington several times a year. His brother Tony is in Chicago.

"No sign of a wife yet, Ted?" "No, not yet," he said, "but I have lots of girl friends. Tony isn't married yet either and he is 30."

He also said, "You know, I worked two summers, '59 and '60, at the Sedalia Democrat — one year in advertising and one year in the news room." He still loves his hometown and goes there at least once a year.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Treatment of Burns

Still Matter of Dispute

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

The treatment of burns is still a much-disputed matter. Suffice it to say that several relatively new treatments all give excellent results. Authorities agree that the best emergency treatment is immediate immersion in a tub or bucket of cold water. This should be continued until the pain stops — often an hour or more. This treatment should not be used if the area burned is so large that it would reduce the body temperature because this would add to the danger of shock.

The direct application of ice should be avoided because it causes too great a constriction of the blood vessels. The cold water treatment is of little value after blisters have formed. Don't spread grease or ointment on your burn without your doctor's advice because the act of spreading adds to the pain. Equally important in the emergency treatment of severe burns is the drinking of a glass of water containing a level teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda.

Following the acute stage, it is important to prevent infection with the germ, Pseudomonas aeruginosa, commonly found on the skin. For this purpose, a newly developed vaccine is effective. Other agents include mafenide (Sulfamylon Cream), 1 per cent silver sulfadiazine ointment, 0.5 per cent silver nitrate cream or 0.1 per cent gentamycin cream. Silicone-soaked mittens aid in the recovery of burned hands. In burns involving the deeper layers of the skin, a skin graft is usually necessary.

Q — I have diverticulitis and have to be on a bland diet. As a result, I am losing weight. How can I gain weight and still stay on the diet?

A — A bland diet is one that contains a minimum of roughage and other gastro-intestinal irritants. Taken in quantities that more than balance your expenditure of energy, you are bound to gain weight. Try eating at least one egg, two cubic inches of cheese, three cubic inches of margarine and four glasses of milk a day, in addition to bread, cereal, custard, blanc mange, ice cream and cake. If you are not gaining, increase the size of the portions. It may be hard to get so much food down at first but, as you start to gain, your appetite should improve.

Q — I am a woman, 42. My doctor says I have Turner's syndrome. Would this cause me to have premenstrual headaches?

A — Turner's syndrome or gonadal dysgenesis is a congenital ovarian deficiency. Headache is not a characteristic complaint.

Looking Backward

Ninety-three Years Ago

The water works went dry about 7 o'clock last night and people who depended on Flat Creek for their moisture had to look to some other source... Mr. C. E. Smith leased his building on the corner of Main and Osage streets, known as Wine Hall, to Hermann Schmidt for a term of two years at $1,500 per annum.

Forty Years Ago

The Chamber of Commerce tour to Smithton was held with a large crowd of Sedalians accompanying the Sedalia Boys' Band which gave a concert. Mayor Fred Holtzen of Smithton gave the welcome address and Ernest Melton of Sedalia the response. The next good will tour will be to Sweet Springs.

Twenty-five Years Ago

Miss Eva Maria Calix of La Ceiba, Honduras, a student at Northwest Missouri State Teachers college, Maryville, has accepted a position to teach Spanish in Smith-Cotton High school this fall. Currently she is on vacation in her native land.

Thought for Today

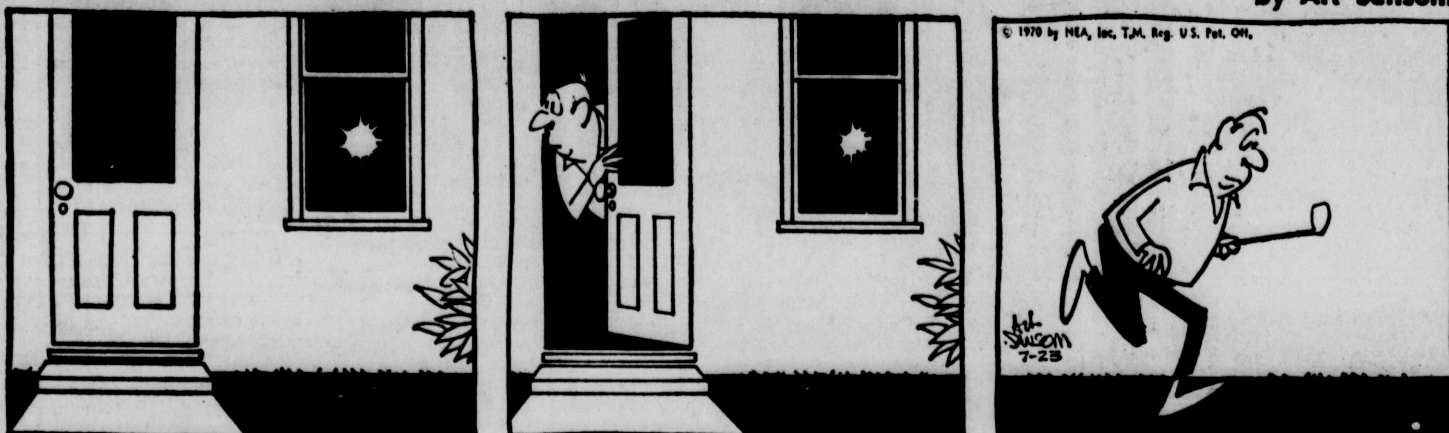

Then he said to me, "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say, 'Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are clean cut off.'" — Ezekiel 37:11.

POLLY'S POINTERS

She Saves Pennies By Saving Flour

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I wasted a lot of flour when flouring fist or chicken to be fried. Now I keep some of each in a different labeled pound coffee can. There always is enough to use several times. I used to throw this leftover flour away but saving it saves a few pennies in these high-priced times —DIANNE

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—My son stored his Boy Scout tent while it was wet and it mildewed. I have stretched it out on the clothesline in the sun as that is the only possible remedy I know. I would appreciate hearing how one can get rid of mildew stains and odor.—BETH

DEAR POLLY—Our boys wanted to blow bubbles but I could not see spending money for that bubble stuff so I made my own. I also made bubble blowers out of plastic ties that come on bread bags. I make a circle out of one and then twist another for the handle, which is bent around the circle at one end. My kids enjoy these as much as bought ones. I hope this will help other mothers who are trying to save in any way they can.—MRS. R. R. S.

DEAR POLLY—I am sure there must be others who have felt the need of the accent of some throw pillows but just could not afford to buy them. Now I have a solution. Take two velour-looking washcloths and whip-stitch them together with yarn around the edges leaving about six inches open at one end. Stuff with foam from the dime store and finish up with a few wool tassels or some fringe and have the perfect touch for some room.

My cats and dogs have a problem letting their owners know when to let them out at "comfort time." We worked that out by attaching a small cow bell, with a piece of heavy string on the clacker, to the side of the back door. All our cat, Susy, has to do is bat the string with her paw and the whole family knows she wants to go out. No more stained rugs.—JO

DEAR POLLY—Do you or any of your mighty fine helpers know how to stop windows from rattling? We live near a railroad track and the trains going by cause the windows to vibrate so badly they seem ready to jar out of their frames. We have used putty and a caulking gun to fill in places but all in vain. We have to keep a small floor fan running to lessen the noise so we can sleep.—GRACE

Fo-Mo-Co Says Profits Fall, Sales Increase

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. reported Thursday its second quarter sales increased slightly this year to $3.9 billion, but second quarter profits fell 7.6 per cent from $180 million in 1969 to $166 million this year.

"Lower profit levels on higher dollar sales in the second quarter reflect sharp increases in labor costs and the prices we pay for materials, transportation and other services," said Henry Ford II, board chairman, in a statement.

Consolidated worldwide sales in the first half of 1970 reached $7.3 billion compared to $7.5 billion a year ago. First half profits reached $291 million compared to $348 million in the first half of 1969—a 16.4 per cent drop.

During the first quarter, Ford reported profits of $124 million on sales of $3.4 billion. A year earlier the figures had been $68 million profits and $3.6 billion sales.

Ford looked to better returns during the second half with elimination of the federal income tax surcharge and the increase in personal income tax exemptions. He said these factors "should ease the financial concerns of many potential car buyers and thus benefit the automobile industry."

Chrysler Corp. reported a week ago that its second quarter operations had generated a profit of $8.1 million after two successive quarters of losses. General Motors' second quarter results are expected in about a week.

Cost of Medicare Goes Up To $5.30

Because of the rising cost in medical care in the country, the July 1970 basic monthly premium paid by people enrolled for the Medicare insurance part of the Medicare will go up from $4 to $5.30.

According to C. Kent Charles, social security district manager in Sedalia, the increase is necessary to keep the medical insurance program on a pay-as-you-go basis. Medical insurance pays for doctor's services, certain medical supplies, diagnostic tests, and certain laboratory and X-ray services.

Earlier Thursday, Miss Franki Cole of Enid, Okla., a black freshman coed who was shot with Dowdell when he was shot, appeared at a news conference scheduled by the Lawrence chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

In a 600-word statement, she said she did not see a gun in Dowdell's possession that night.

Testimony from witnesses at the coroner's inquest was the youth was armed and fired one shot at Garrett before the officer returned three rounds, killing Dowdell.

Miss Cole also said she heard only one shot.

Charles S. Scott, a black attorney of Topeka who represented the family of the slain youth at the inquest, said he planned to seek the aid of the Justice Department.

A statement released by the ACLU said:

"There is strong reason to believe that the dead youth's civil rights were violated in the events that led to his death, and that facts central to that evidence were not brought out in the coroner's inquest."

The fighting for the onetime resort area entered its 13th day. Government troops were being resupplied by air.

Associated Press correspondent John T. Wheeler reported from Phnom Penh that the plateau has little strategic value. But he quoted a Cambodian spokesman as saying the government was making an all-out effort to hang onto it because "we have to hold as many positions as we can."

by a lone police car with its red light flashing, had proceeded slowly and quietly to the church.

The procession crossed Massachusetts Avenue, where the city's annual Sidewalk Bazaar sponsored by merchants was under way. Hundreds of whites gathered for the traditional day and the carnival atmosphere gave way to silence.

Many bowed their heads. An elderly white woman standing near the intersection wept by the procession wept.

A resident near the church posted a sign on a tree in front of his house. It read: "Law-abiding blacks want our respect. Let us all prepare ourselves to give it to them."

Another memorial march, this one by predominantly white youths—many of them hippies—branded "street people" by police—was held earlier in the day without incident.

It was learned representatives of the black community had requested that the whites not participate in the funeral procession.

BUSINESS NEWS

T. R. McGuire, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, was featured speaker at the 1970 annual stockholder's meeting held recently. The first session of the meeting was held at the State Fair Agriculture Building and the final session was in the Richardson Auditorium, Lincoln University, Jefferson City.

Francis J. Mergen, branch manager of the Production Credit Office in Sedalia, attended the meeting. Joe Marshall of Marshall, was re-elected to a three year term on the board of directors.

Strike Talks Break

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Negotiations have broken off again in the four-month-old Kansas City construction strike, deadlocked within a dollar of settlement, the regional federal mediator, Paul E. Bowers, said Thursday.

Bowers came to Kansas City from St. Louis last month in a personal effort to resolve the costly labor disagreement.

He told a news conference that bargaining discussions have "reached a point where the only ones really interested in a settlement are the mediators themselves."

Bowers said, "It would be a waste of my time to stay here on a daily basis."

The regional mediator said he is going to Washington instead to discuss the situation with his boss, J. Curtis Counts, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Bowers added that it is possible Counts may be persuaded to come to Kansas City to help "move this thing off dead center."

The Kansas City Builders Association and the five striking building trades unions have narrowed the gap substantially, Bowers said, but both sides are still sold on the idea each is right and refuse to budge any further.

Bowers said the difference between them now stands at less than a dollar for the total economic package. He would not elaborate.

The laborers originally had asked for an increase of $5.50 an hour over three years, with $3.50 of that to become effective immediately. The builders had offered a three-year increase of $3 an hour. The hourly wage under the old contract was $4.

Other issues also remain unresolved, Bowers said, but all are expected to fall in place when the wage package is negotiated. The mediator said negotiations could resume at any time while he is away.

If there is no change, Bowers said he will return to Kansas City within 10 days, possibly bringing Counts back with him for intensive efforts to conclude the dispute.

The prolonged strike has had a deteriorating effect on the city's economy, costing an estimated $3 million a week with more than $73 million in public and private projects shut down.

Premier Gives Up Effort

ROME (AP) — Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti, unable to overcome Italian party animosities despite his political skills, gave up trying to form a government Thursday.

His failure to patch together a new four party coalition heightened a sense of political gloom rare even for Italy.

"The government crisis landed today in a labyrinth, from which it is impossible to see a way out," Italy's largest circulation daily newspaper, Corriere della Sera, commented.

Andreotti, a 51-year-old Christian Democrat, called on President Giuseppe Saragat following an unsuccessful, last-minute attempt to ward off failure. In a brief meeting, he formally renounced the mandate to form a four party government that the head of state had given him July 11.

A man of wry humor who usually has a word for newsmen, Andreotti walked away from the Quirinal presidential palace without comment.

Saragat's office announced that he would consult with political and parliamentary leaders Saturday to discuss how to give Italy a new government, its 32nd since the fall of fascism.

Saragat could ask another Christian Democrat, or Andreotti himself, to make another attempt to form a government, or he could dissolve Parliament and call elections three years ahead of schedule.

Most responsible political observers refrained from making predictions in view of the confusion.

The political tableau following Andreotti's renunciation included two feuding Socialist parties, both refusing to enter into a coalition with the other under present circumstances, and an internally shaken Christian Democrat party.

The situation was even more chaotic than when Christian Democrat Premier Mariano Rumor resigned his center-left government July 6 under the weight of labor agitation and political bickering within his coalition.

Today's aluminum industry production is more than 10 billion pounds a year. This is almost 13 times the rate of about 20 years ago.

Cereals Lacking Nutrition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the most heavily advertised cereals—including Wheaties, Cheerios and the top brands of shredded wheat and corn flakes—have about as much nutritional value as a shot of whisky, Senate investigators were told today.

"In short, they fatten but do little to prevent malnutrition. They have calories and little else," Robert B. Choate, a Washington nutritional specialist, told a Senate consumer subcommittee.

"If a family likes dry cereals and can afford them, there are several with respectable nutritional content," he said in a prepared statement accompanying a detailed study of 60 cereal brands on the market.

"But," he added, "it is apparent in this first of several food industry analyses that we humans are viewed not as beings to be nourished, but as suckers to be sold."

Cereal makers will be given a chance to respond later, subcommittee aides said.

Choate said a frequent defense of the dry-cereal industry takes the form of describing a cereal's nutrient value in combination with sugar and milk.

But, Choate said, his studies showed "the average cereals—those outside of the top 20—fail as a complete meal even with milk added. Even if the amount of cereal were doubled while the milk remained constant, the nutrient value of these meals would still be inadequate."

Choate, a citizen-lobbyist who runs a small consulting firm, has studied the nation's food policies for the past three years.

Accidents

Steven Lloyd Boots, 23, 811 South Carr, was taken to Bothwell Hospital for treatment, then released following a two-car collision in the 100 Block of East Third at 3 p.m. Thursday.

According to police, Boots lost control of his 1970 Buick and it struck a parked 1968 Pontiac owned by Mary Frances Marti, Clinton, after damaging two parking meters.

The Pontiac was pushed across the curb and came to rest up against the east corner of the Interstate Securities building. Both cars were extensively damaged by the collision.

Police Report

Mrs. Jay Nicholson, 1400 East 13th, reported to police that two boys took a flag from her front porch about 3:40 p.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Lucille Jenkins, 914 South Beacon, reported to police that someone took $50 from her purse.

She stated that the purse was in the bedroom of her house and the money was taken about 2 p.m. Thursday.

Emily A. Viets, 1404 West Fifth, reported to police that two small iron flower pots, a large black iron pot and a patio table were taken from her yard sometime Wednesday night.

The articles were valued at $20.

Officers were called to Kenny's Coin-O-Matic Laundry in the State Fair Shopping Center at 3:17 a.m. Thursday, where they found two supply rooms had been broken into and ransacked.

Missing were $69 worth of soda pop, candy and paper cups.

On a routine patrol at 4:20 a.m. police officers discovered that a candy machine was missing from Kenny's Coin-O-Matic Laundry, 12th and Gorrell.

Value of the machine and contents was placed at $250.

Acting on a tip, police took three juvenile boys into custody at 2:40 a.m. after they allegedly stole a portable radio valued at $50 from a car owned by Kimball Iman, 1623 West Fifth.

One of the three was also charged with stealing a battery-operated lantern valued at $20 from a car owned by Elton Lathrop, 1419 West Fourth.

Study Group Meets

The West Central Study Group held its regular monthly meeting at Bothwell Hotel Tuesday and heard a discussion on isometric and isokinetic exercises from Art Coffman of Robar Sales Co.

Road Conditions Are Called Good

In a report to the judges of the Pettis County Court, Glenn W. Irick, state highway inspector, called the quality of maintenance work done on county roads so far "good."

The report showed 39 per cent of the planned improvements had been completed. Approximately 27 miles of county roads are slated for improvements this year.

The report said that the improved roads were in very good condition and both crushed stone and screened gravel surfacing was of very good quality.
